THEY DIDN'T KNOW

Parents Declare Boys Started Slain Girl's 'Club'

Lorna Lax of Kentfield, found stabbed and strangled in her "fort" Monday, may have been involved in a "club" with boys but it "originated with the boys, not with her," the parents declared in an interview this morning.

Lorna was 12 years old, but physically she was only about 9 or 10, said her father, John S. Lax. He put it that, "She was not matured at all, not even approached adolescence. Physically she was only 9 or 10."

The parents said they are confident that when the whole truth is known "it will be shown that she did not instigate it (the club). Some of the boys were 16; she was only 12, and physically only 10."

Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos disclosed that the boys had told him the girl had invited them to join her club for rendezvous in the "fort." The boys claim she charged a fee and blankets for initiation and money for subsequent visits.

The parents acknowledged that Lorna had handicaps—a cleft palate about which other youngsters tormented her, an adventurous spirit that caused her to stay away overnight on two previous occasions, and a tendency to "borrow" things.

"But we always tried to show her right from wrong and immediately returned things to the owners," said Lax. "We quit spanking her about a year or two ago; she was too big for that. She was on restrictions quite a few times."

Parents restricted the girl by confining her to the house and yard. Lorna was on restriction last weekend when she stayed out for the third time in her short life—the last time.

Mrs. Amy Lax said Lorna was ill in bed Friday night. But Saturday morning she had vanished, leaving a note she was going to the "city" and would be back for church Sunday.

"We were very concerned and looking for her," the parents said. "But we kept thinking she would come back any minute as she always had." They did not ask the girl's friends because they feared that would lead to embarrassing publicity, they said.

"But we realize now it was a great error," said Lax, hanging his head. "We should have reported it right away." Did the parents know of the "fort" in the thicket a block or so from the home?

"Heavens no!" Mrs. Lax exclaimed. "The first time we knew anything about the fort was on Tuesday." That was the day the newspapers came out

Hunt For Murder Weapon Fruitless

Investigation of the Lorna Lax murder case today seemed deeply bogged down in frustration.

No one was available in the Marin County sheriff's office for information on the Kentfield mystery which has kept top officials almost sleepless since last Monday night. But it was known that yesterday's search for a death weapon, perhaps scissors or some sort of dagger, had taken investigators through seemingly endless brush and water without success.

A clerk in the office said all inspectors were out, apparently still questioning every acquaintance of the 12-year-old girl who was found stabbed to death in a thicket near College of Marin.

Only because "we want a clear-cut result" has San Rafael attorney Thomas P. Boyd stipulated that he wants an advance look at questions to be put to two boys, acquaintances of the slain girl, who may undergo lie detector tests next week, he said today.

"Experience with lie detectors shows that a lot depends on the type of question asked," Boyd said. "There must not be ambiguous questions or the truth won't come out—the whole process won't mean a thing."

"We want the tests but we want a clear-cut result from them."

Boyd has been retained as attorney for two sons of Norman Fortner, Norman Jr., 13, and Clifford, 15. He said he is convinced of their innocence.

Ike, Defense Chiefs Huddle

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The Army, Navy and Air Force secretaries were described after a presidential conference today as believing "they have a good, balanced program" in the next budget.

The three civilian secretaries spent more than two hours with Eisenhower, along with Deputy Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. and Dr. Herbert F. York, Pentagon research director.

Serving as spokesman for the quintet before the flight back to Washington, Gates said the military budget for the 1961 fiscal year still stands at around 41 billion dollars and that in another week the budget should be all set.

Asked if the service secretaries are happy about the budget, Gates replied:

"Yes, I think that they believed they have a good, balanced program."

No, he said, they had no complaints about allotments, roles and missions for their services.

Carmel Forest Fire Revives

CARMEL (UP) — A wind-whipped forest fire, believed under control last night, came back to life today and threatened to spread over another 300 acres. (Earlier story on page 16.)

County Feels Drizzle

Most Marinites slept through it, but rain fell on the county's parched surface early today, leaving shallow puddles and measuring .01 of an inch at the rain gauge atop the San Rafael City Hall.

Halt A-Tests, U.N. Appeals To All Powers

U.S. Move Assures New Debate On Hungarian Revolt

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP) —The United Nations General Assembly voted 60-1 today to appeal to all powers to stop nuclear weapons test voluntarily.

The lone vote against a 23-power Afro-Asian resolution was cast by France, which plans to hold its first atomic test in the Sahara desert soon. The United States and Britain abstained.

The resolution appeals to the United States, Russia and Britain, now negotiating a permanent nuclear test ban at Geneva, to continue their voluntary suspension of tests and asks "other states to desist from such tests."

UNUSUAL SESSION

The 60-1 tally at an unusual Saturday session duplicated the result of the vote in the resolution in the Assembly's main political committee. Twenty countries abstained today, three who were absent in yesterday's committee vote joining that column. Jordan, absent yesterday, voted "yes" today. Laos, which voted "yes" yesterday, was absent today.

The Assembly also approved 78-0, with two abstentions, a Japanese - Swedish - Austrian measure expressing hope for a permanent test ban and asking the three nuclear powers to continue their voluntary suspension.

HUNGARIAN QUESTION

The United States assured a new airing for the Soviet-suppressed 1956 Hungarian revolution by formally requesting the General Assembly to debate it anew.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge filed the request, supporting the demand made last week by Sir Leslie Munro of New Zealand, U.N. special representative on the Hungarian question, that the item be included on the Assembly's agenda.

Russia objected earlier this week that Munro was not entitled to request the Assembly to debate an item and won a first round victory which postponed a meeting of the world parliament's steering committee until Monday.

55,000 Acres At Pt. Reyes Surveyed In Park Proposal

A spokesman for the National Park Service said today a government survey is being made on 55,000 acres of the peninsula to determine whether the government should acquire the proposed 35,000 acre coastal strip for a federal recreation area.

Robert S. Luntley, acting chief of the regional office, said his men were surveying the entire area adjacent to the proposed park to find out what effects such a recreation area might have on the agricultural countryside.

"We are surveying the large area to investigate choices open," he said.

Luntley outlined the choices as the government purchasing the entire 55,000 acre area and leasing it back to present owners, most of whom are dairy ranchers; acquiring only an easement that would keep the land clear of subdivisions and other obstructions; purchasing only the coastal strip for the recreation area; or dropping the whole matter.

An easement or "scenic zoning" would assure that no undesirable structures could mar the scenery, Luntley said.

He said such zoning would probably have to be consented to by the property owner.

The 55,000-acre figure came up when Rep. Clement W. Miller of Corte Madera spoke to directors of the West Marin Property Owners Assn. This week in Point Reyes Station. Legislation before Congress is for an 35,000-acre area stretching south from Point Reyes toward Bolinas.

Miller was quoted as saying he believed the survey being made by the Parks Department has shown it would be more feasible to acquire the whole 55,000 acres that just the coastal portion.

Ross Pilot Killed In Pacific Crash

Navy Jet Goes Down In Okinawa Typhoon

MAX BAER
Heart attack fatal

A Ross man was killed when the Navy jet plane he was piloting in a typhoon evacuation flight from Okinawa to Japan crashed into the sea Thursday, it was reported to his home today.

Lt. Karl R. Kruger, 24-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Erich J. Kruger of 44 Glenwood avenue, Ross, had been stationed in Nawa, Okinawa, since March as a jet pilot with a utility squadron.

His plane was lost about 100 miles off Okinawa toward Japan, the Navy telegraphed.

Kruger was the brother of Katherine Kruger of Ross, the grandson of Mrs. Charles M. Gunn of Sausalito, and the nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Denicke of Ross and Robert M. Gunn of Sausalito.

A native of San Francisco, he graduated from high school in Huntington Park and from U.C.-LA, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Kruger joined the Navy in June, 1956.

Max Baer, Former Fight Champ, Dies

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Max Baer, happy-go-lucky former heavyweight champion of the world, died today of a heart attack in his hotel room.

The 50-year-old former champion was preparing for a day of visiting with Southern California friends when he was stricken as he was shaving in his poolside room at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel.

Baer suffered the heart seizure at 8:10 a.m. and managed to stagger to the telephone and notify the hotel's switchboard, which called Dr. Edward S. Koziol, the house physician.

CHEST PAINS

The doctor rushed to Baer's bedside and began medication as the ex-champion complained of severe chest pains. The fire department-rescue squad administered oxygen.

Baer began showing signs of recovery and joked with Dr. Koziol, who urged him to go to a hospital. Then a second attack struck him and he died at 9 a.m.

The burly ex-champion came here Thursday, a day after he had refereed the nationally televised bout at Phoenix, Ariz., between Zora Folley and Alonzo Johnson.

WON TITLE IN 1934

Baer won the heavyweight title from Primo Carnera on June 14, 1934, in one of the most savage bouts in the American ring. He knocked out the huge Italian in the 11th round.

He held the championship for only one year, losing it on June 13, 1935, to James J. Braddock on a 15-round decision in New York City. Baer continued fighting until 1942, quitting the ring after being knocked out by Lou Nova in eight rounds.

But Baer did not drop out of public sight when he quit boxing. He continued as a referee, a television performer, worked

NO ROBBER

Holdup Note Found At Marin Bank

A mysterious holdup note demanding "all your cash" turned up on a writing desk at the Bank of America's San Rafael office yesterday. But no would-be robber ever showed up.

A bank customer, Charles G. Ellicott of 347 Hyacinth way, Terra Linda, noticed some writing on the reverse of a withdrawal slip he was making out.

Ellicott turned the slip over and discovered a note reading: "This is a holdup. I have a bottle of acid ready to throw in your face. So give me all your cash."

He gave the note to bank officials, who called San Rafael police. Police reported the case to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Electronics Firm Moves Into Temporary Marin Quarters

Temporary quarters providing 5,000 square feet of working space at 27 Jordan street, San Rafael, have been taken on short lease by Fairchild Semi-Conductor Corp. of Mountain View, in order to get under way as soon as possible on instrument manufacture in Marin.

"Nobody is in yet and quite a lot of preparatory work must still be done," said Dr. Robert N. Noyce, vice president and general manager at company headquarters. "But we expect to be able to start moving some people in during December."

Total personnel in the building will finally be about 50, starting with half a dozen from Mountain View, he said, adding that "we certainly expect to hire some locally."

Of those to be used in the temporary building, about 25 to 30 will comprise administrators, secretaries, accountants and engineers, Dr. Noyce said. The remainder, numbering perhaps 20 to 25, will be assembly workers.

Diodes, a type of circuit element used in manufacture of electronic devices and especially suitable to computer application, are to be made by Fairchild in Marin County. Presumably this is the work to be undertaken in the Jordan street location previous to completion about next June of a main plant, the location of which is still to be disclosed.

In the permanent plant, agreement on which has already been reached but with announcement awaiting completion of soil tests, an initial 250 are to be employed with the number expected to rise to 500 by the end of 1961.

Dr. Noyce has expressed a preference for employing Marin residents so far as possible. Assembly workers can be trained without too much difficulty, he said today.

"We find that these can reach about 95 per cent of their best capacity within six weeks," he said. "Engineers, however, probably don't make their salaries within their first six months."

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Dinner Dance Will Honor Travelers

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

A "black tie" affair will be the dinner dance hosted by four couples at the Meadow Club on Dec. 15 honoring "our travelers." The party is being given by Dr. and Mrs. S. Nicholas Jacobs, erstwhile Marinites, who now live in San Francisco, and Messrs. and Mesdames Andrew Halley, Paul McArdle and Leon Smith.

Honored will be the four Marin couples, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paganini, the Robert Quinlans and George Schirmers; also Mr. and Mrs. Louis Petri of San Francisco. The Schirmers, who have been in South America, will go to Mexico before they return home in a couple of weeks. The other honor guests are all back. The Brennans, Paganinis and Petris rendezvoused in Europe and the Quinlans were in South America.

THE CONSUL GENERAL of Portugal, Vasco Pereira, and his wife were guests of honor at the dinner party Mrs. Agnes Gump gave Thursday night at her Sausalito home. Other guests were Messrs. and Mesdames Kenneth Brown, Walter Baird, Paul O'Gara, Roy Starbird, Charles Wilmarth, Mrs. Nancy Emmons and Dr. Gerald Goodhue.

A NUMBER of chartered buses left Marin this morning bound for Palo Alto with passengers who are attending the Big Game between Stanford and Cal. One busload, hosted by the Gregory Sheehans and the Douglas Ballingers, left from the Sheehan home in Greenbrae and will return there for dinner. In the party, in addition to the hosts, are Dr. and Mrs. James Dawson, Messrs. and Mesdames John Munson, Herbert Hanson, Warren Heiman, Dohrmann Pischel, John Morse, Neil Fulton, Philip Crane, Jack Curley, Michael Khourie, Noel Kelly, John Hale, James Peggs and Stewart Harrison.

A THANKSGIVING theme will be carried out in the decorations for the dinner Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Arons are giving tonight. Dorothy Arons is noted for her artistry and guests at the Arons home are always delighted with her novel and beautiful decor. Among those present tonight will be Dr. and Mrs. William Magladry, Dr. and Mrs. Martin Guttman, Dr. and Mrs. Alex Ker, Messrs. and Mesdames William McDevitt, Robert Walker, William Descalzo, Harold Geister, Marion Marks, Lewis Aaron, Alfred Renger, Walter Pierce, Robert Lee, Albert Walz, Leavitt Olds, William Killian and Carroll E. Thomas.

HONORING Mrs. Hartford Rapp of San Francisco, a recent bride, Mrs. Percival Scales entertained recently at a luncheon at her Ross home. Mrs. Rapp's former home was in Hawaii.

DELIGHTFUL was the first Marin Symphony preview of the season staged on Wednesday at the Meadow Club. Mrs. Robert Shultz, president of the Symphony Guild, who welcomed the members and guest to the morning event, was lovely in a red wool dress and a black veil with bows on her blonde hair. She is a special kind of musician. She said in her brief talk, "Musication" and it brought together a large group to enjoy "glimpses" of the concert to be presented on Nov. 27. In that group were two women who have worked through the years to bring better music to Marin: Mrs. Norman B. Livermore and Mrs. Berrien P. Anderson.

Mrs. Schultz introduced Mrs. William Pemberton and Mrs. Juan Hayes, who have been working on the membership drive since last spring. Mrs. Cloyd Kimball, chairman of previews, and Mrs. Fred Drexler, who prepared the calendar. Arthur Bloomfield, art editor of the News-Call Bulletin, the principal speaker, gave the background of the composers whose works will be featured at the concert and interpreted the compositions. Richard Norris, who will be piano soloist at the concert played a portion of the Franz Liszt composition which will be featured. Following the preview, luncheon was served in the club dining room.

AMONG THE GIRLS who were welcomed into The Spinners at the San Francisco home of Sallie Glassie Monday night were Virginia Gande, daughter, of the William Gandes of Kent Woodlands, who is a graduate of Katharine Branson's and Smith, and Donna Zander, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Zander of Ross. Donna is a Dominican College graduate.

FOR EXTENSIVE TRAVELS in the Orient Col. and Mrs. Earle P. Schouten of San Geronimo left on Thursday. While the three months trip is mainly for pleasure the Schoutens will attend to some business in Japan. They are also going to Hong Kong and Bangkok.

Colonel Schouten is now retired from the Army and he and his wife were welcomed back to Marin after a long absence. They have a herd of registered Shetland ponies on their ranch and intend to keep some animals for breeding.

NOVEL INVITATIONS were issued by Mr. and Mrs. Vance Oliveau to the party they gave last Saturday night at their home in Lucas Valley. The typewritten invitations, pasted on tear sheets of the Independent-Journal, said: "The fireplace is different and we've moved a few walls (so no money left to carpet the halls!) There are flowers in our garden and the grass is growing green (which means we are down to our very last bean). So we're throwing a party—a champagne affair . . . and inviting you all to come see our lair. A year to the day of the date we moved . . . Do come—three to seven—and join in the din."

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Sharp of Sacramento who spent the weekend with the Oliveaus. Also Capt. and Mrs. Donald Parsons, Capt. and Mrs. Sterling Mutz, Messrs. and Mesdames Victor Sloman, Harrison Wheeler, Stewart Kirchner, Walter Wright, Will McCune and Mrs. Carrie Mahoney of Lucas Valley; Countess Carin de Plessin and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Dickson of Woodacre; Messrs and Mesdames Leland Wiese, Jacques Nadler, Mrs. Elvira Becker, Mrs. Barbara Powers, Richard Wood and Andrew Casal of Mill Valley; Messrs. and Mesdames Harold L. Heakin and Sylvain Hermelin of San Francisco; Messrs. and Mesdames Frank Casal and Hal Maze of Alameda; Mr. and Mrs. James Dorais of Greenbrae; Mr. and Mrs. George Pfeiffer of Los Altos; Mr. and Mrs. Kent Voden of Redwood City and from Orinda, Pierre Favre, a friend of Vance since they attended school in Switzerland, and Mrs. Favre.

Tragic Death Of Little Girl Should Jolt Us Into Reality

The headlines of this and other newspapers this week carried the news of a terrible and shocking crime. It is terrible that a 12-year-old girl should be killed. It is shocking the way she died.

Yet it almost seems people are more concerned about the fact that such a thing could happen here in Marin than that it did happen. Although the search for the murderer was pressed by officials, the people seem more determined to make sure such a thing could not happen again.

Unfortunate as it was, perhaps we needed such a tragedy to make us open our eyes. Marin has a bad reputation insofar as its youth is concerned. We know that reputation has not been truly deserved.

Yet here we have proof that all is not well. Here we have proof that we responsible adults and parents just don't know what's going on. Neither, apparently, do the authorities and agencies we hold responsible. Or if they do know, why did it happen?

It took a Sputnik to shake a lethargic public into interest in its schools. Perhaps now the death of a little girl can shake us all into paying more attention to our children; to realize their problems and how soon in life they develop; to keep closer track of their activities, where they are and whom they are with; to make sure they have things to do and know what things they are doing.

In short, it may jolt us enough to begin to be good parents and citizens again; jolt us into a deep look at our juvenile problem, what it really is and what we can do about it.

If it does, the tragedy of this young girl's death may become a turning point for a great many other youths of Marin.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

LITTLE PULSE, BIG EFFECTS

A small, electronic box acts as a heart stinger for a 67-year-old man in New York City.

When his heart slows down to a dangerous rate 6 to 12 times a day, the two-pound heart-pacer jolts his heart with an electric pulse.

The $585 machine delivers constant tiny shocks to the man's heart. Only when the heart starts to fail does he need the heart stinger. The portable device enables him to lead a normal life. Although the heart stinger delivers barely enough power to light a flashlight, it keeps the man alive.

There is a reminder for each of us in the power of this tiny electric pulse that keeps life from being extinguished. The smallest effort you make in Christ's name to keep the flicker of spiritual values alive in a sick world can be at least a step toward peace and away from disaster.

You can be God's instrument in sending a divine pulse into some facet of modern life.

"A bruised reed He will not break, and a smoking wick He will not quench."
(Matthew 12:30)

Let me search for the bit of divine goodness in every man, O Lord, and build on that.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Eight Marinites Listed On New Nixon For President Committee

By CHAPIN A. DAY

If you think that the 1960 presidential campaign has not started, you must have missed the opening of the "Brown For President" office in San Francisco or the organization of the Nixon For President Committee of Northern California.

There were a number of Marinites listed in that last organization, formation of which was announced this week. Included are Mrs. Herbert K. Walton and Dist. Atty. William O. Weissich of San Rafael; Elmer S. Worlund, GOP County Central Committee chairman of San Anselmo; Gerald E. Misner, Mill Valley; Fred G. Dupuis, former congressional candidate of Tiburon; Mrs. Sylvester J. McAtee, Sausalito; Curtiss Hayden, Jr., Ross, and Charles P. Davies, Novato.

Spectacularly missing from the group, which was announced shortly after Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York passed through, is Senator John F. McCarthy of San Rafael, who was flying around the state with Governor Rockefeller.

THE NEW YORK governor was widely quoted on his speeches the length of the West Coast. However, some of the more interesting observations were made in less publicized small meetings. For instance:

Standing on a gold upholstered love seat in the St. Francis Hotel, the governor warned a group of central committee chairmen that "the public doesn't want to be kidded. They are interested and concerned about national and international politics today."

Chided that some people were saying his speeches were too high brow, "make you look like an egg head," Rockefeller said he "doesn't think the American public must be spoken down to."

At the same time he warned the county party leaders that both the public and politicians "too often get bogged down in the problems of today and can't get excited about the future. We've got to be excited about the future. It is the only way we can make our democratic society work. If our youth should fail to get excited about the future we would soon die out."

He told of the experience of his son Steve, then 21 and not yet married to Norwegian housemaid Anne-Marie Rasmussen. Steve campaigned with his father for the governorship.

"Why didn't they teach us in school how democracy really works?" questioned Steve after meetings with block wardens, committee members and precinct workers.

"I was often told by well meaning friends, 'Why go into politics; that's a dirty business . . .,' the governor went on. 'That's a sad thing. They should go into politics themselves and see the wonderful people in it answering the challenge of how we can make our system of politics work.'"

WHAT ABOUT the possibility of a party split if he should run against Vice President Nixon, particularly in California?

"I think it is useful to have discussion and excitement in a party. It stirs up the party, gives it life. And I think the party workers deserve a candidate that they think can win," answered Rockefeller.

But he assured his audience he did not foresee a bitter, party-splitting battle in any event. He promised "to support" whoever was nominated, although he would not commit himself to campaign for the nominee.

MEANWHILE OVER in the Democratic camp Gov. Edmund G. Brown had had a rude shock. The governor had been looking forward to a meeting of Democratic officials next weekend in Fresno to help him make up his mind whether he should be an "active" candidate for the presidency or merely a "favorite son" candidate.

As in 1957, when following a similar meeting Brown announced he would become a candidate for governor, he said he would "be guided in my decision by what happens" in Fresno.

Nothing is going to happen in Fresno. Assemblyman William A. Munnell, Democratic State Central Committee chairman and a "Brown all the way" supporter, announced the meeting has been cancelled. Only about half of the legislators invited accepted the invitation. Munnell said Southland legislators were "pretty perturbed" about Brown's attitude.

In any event, Brown, who

Colored Flower Photo Exceptional

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

The directors of the Garden Society of Marin want to express their sincere appreciation of the fine publicity the Independent-Journal gave to our annual Fall Flower Festival held at the Marin Art and Garden Center the 7th and 8th of this month. We know your excellent coverage helped materially in making the festival a success again this year.

In this connection we should like to make special mention of the outstanding color picture of Jill Sigler with the mums at the residence of Hugh Paterson that appeared in your Nov. 6 issue. The photo, showing as it did such a wonderful variety of color, was exceptional, and the photographer, Bob Hax, is certainly to be complimented. Please express our appreciation to him, and thank you all again for your splendid cooperation in this annual flower event.

I'm Sick At My Stomach

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

Our modern society stands convicted of one of the most shocking crimes — omission. We slave to earn money for various charities. We give gladly to United Crusade and almost every other plea for financial aid. We stand in line to vote for new and better judges.

There are fancier buildings being built to house our latest institutions; our mail boxes are overflowing with new and better gimmicks to entice our help. We pay higher prices for specialists to help the disturbed school child; our teachers are specially trained to seek and find the mixed-up, the angry.

Wasn't there someone, somewhere that could have helped one disturbed little girl who felt so alone, rejected, that nothing was left but to become a sickening, shocking headline to digest with our morning coffee? . . .

The next time I give money to a charity, vote for a new judge, agree to more taxes, I'm going to look pretty closely into where the money goes. How much for real estate, wages, publicity, new fund raising campaigns? I am getting off the sucker list and back to a clear conscience.

My sleep will be disturbed for a good long time because I left my conscience at home asleep, believing these various agencies were looking after all troubled children, not just a few isolated cases.

I'm sick at my stomach. How about you?

BENNETT CERF

Mark Twain, vacationing upstate, decided to take a drive one evening, but told the stable boy he did not have to wait up for him. "Just lock up," ordered Twain, "and put the key under this mat by the front door."

When the humorist returned home, however, there was no sign of the key. Exasperated, he woke up the stable boy who speedily reassured him, "Don't go losing your temper, Mr. Mark. I found a much better place to hide that key!"

Judge Thomas Swoops Around So He's Being Dubbed Judge Zorro

There's a new "courtroom" going up, almost unnoticed, in the county courthouse.

New municipal court Judge Leonard A. Thomas says the new chambers being readied for him on the second floor of the old courthouse is large enough for a small courtroom.

Cases involving only a few attorneys and clients could well be heard there. A few chairs could be provided for the public. This might save a lot of running around, looking for a vacant courtroom or dashing across the street to the San Rafael City Hall council chambers.

Dashing back and fourth across the street isn't too bad now, but wait until the judges get their new robes. You can see him swooping back and fourth, robes flowing.

No wonder they're calling him Judge Zorro.

THEY TELL ME Harry Albert, back from a tour of Europe and an audience with the Pope, is getting to look more and more like the Pope himself.

Speaking of resemblances, we thought it was Nikita himself in downtown San Rafael the other day. The gent was none other than Andy Pedrol, long time businessman who fights for individual rights, especially along B street.

WHETHER THE origin is Portuguese or Spanish I would not know, but the name "Ter-Linda High" is apparently well received. Some of the other suggested names dropped out along the way were Las Gallinas, which means little chicken or quail, and Vallecitos, which sounds a bit "institutional," according to some observers.

New International Club For Heads Of Government May Meet On Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — If things go right — and they probably won't — future heads of government will have a kind of international club where one push on the buzzer will bring them together for a weekend summit.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain has just hammered on an old theme of his again: The coming summit conference must be followed by a series of such meetings. Premier Nikita Khrushchev is all for frequent get-togethers, too.

That isn't the way President Eisenhower saw it, at least until recently. Maybe he's changing his mind. No longer ago than last summer he was talking against summit meetings and yearning for the good old days of foreign ministers' meetings.

Yet, in the short time since then these things have happened:

LATER IN THE summer he made a fast trip around Western Europe to see the Allied leaders; he had Khrushchev over here and promises to return the visit; next month he's going to 11 foreign countries to see the leaders; then he joins a pre-summit meeting in Paris; and in the spring will be off to the summit itself.

Macmillan became a sturdy advocate of frequent meetings between heads of government after he journeyed to Moscow early this year, talked with Khrushchev and felt this was the way to get things done, although what he got done isn't clear.

At the same time Khrushchev dismissed and belittled foreign ministers as a bunch of messenger boys who could do only what the top men permitted them anyway. And, since this was the case, he reasoned, then:

Since only the top men — the heavyweights — could really decide anything, then let them meet and get going.

THIS WAS WHAT Eisenhower was saying in mid-summer:

1. He doesn't like the modern development of diplomacy — the summit conferences. He considered it a step back-

But the biggest joker of all was the name "Alfred E. Newman." No one knows for sure who Newman is, but the grapevine has it that he's a "mad" publisher who makes his appearance periodically.

FOR THE FIRST time in eight years, I had a chance to "revisit" the Far East. Robert F. and Marion Merritt of Novato and their charming daughter, Terry, created an Oriental atmosphere at "Far East Night" at a Novato church last week. Colored slides, colorful kimonos and gowns from China and the Philippines, and souvenirs on display set the theme. Even the food was Oriental.

And if you want to get an insight into the quiet serenity of the Orient at its best, just talk to Mrs. Merritt.

EVEN AN ENLIGHTENED judge sometimes finds himself in the dark.

On Friday the 13th, neon tubes burned out in an inner room of the courthouse. Out of the dark came hizzoner and two court reporters, groping their way and rubbing their eyes.

THERE'S NOTHING bashful about bashful-looking Dave Menary Jr., new city councilman for San Rafael.

His performance at the first council meeting was refreshing.

IF YOU RUN out of parking meter coins on Fourth street, all you have to do is walk over to the shoe shine man across the street from the Rafael Theater. He's got a box with this sign:

"Meter Change. Do It Yourself."

ward for the heads of state to spend their time on work that belongs to specialists, like foreign ministers.

2. He preferred seeing the ministers enjoy the exercise of the great authority given them in the 19th century.

As an example of what he didn't like about the summit idea he cited the 1807 meeting between Napoleon and Czar Alexander of Russia on a raft in the River Niemen near Tilsit. They talked of dividing up the world, but later became fierce enemies.

But there were some very practical and excellent reasons for letting foreign ministers do the meeting in the 19th Century. Getting to and from an international meeting in those days of sail, stagecoach, steam and trains took weeks or months.

NO PRESIDENT would want to be out of the country — and actually out of touch — so long. But with modern air travel, presidents and prime ministers can go half way around the world in a day, meet several days, and be home within a week.

And while away they can be kept just as fully informed about events and problems at home.

True, foreign ministers, being specialists in their field, can go into vast detail in reaching agreements that would be beyond the scope of presidents and prime ministers.

But, before the ministers can even get into detail, there must be a general agreement. And, as Khrushchev points out, they can't agree on anything unless the top man at home says so.

THAT BRINGS the argument back to Khrushchev: Since only the top men can really reach agreements, then let them meet, try to agree in a general way, and, having done that, turn the details over to the foreign ministers.

If the spring summit meeting proves fruitful at all, it will increase the pressure on government heads to meet more often. Even a failure wouldn't discourage the idea they should try again.

Augustus Marwieh, a native of Liberia, West Africa, and a student at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry, will address the First Baptist Church of San Geronimo Valley, Woodacre, at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Marwieh became a Christian through the influence of a missionary in 1943. He went to the capital of Liberia and attended high school, being graduated as class valedictorian in 1953. He came to the United States the following year and has studied at the University of California, Simpson Bible College and the University of Oklahoma.

At the Marin seminary he is studying for a master's degree in Christian education. He plans to return to Liberia to reduce the unwritten native language to writing and translate the Bible into that language.

India Lecture Set Tuesday In Mill Valley

"India At The Crossroads" is the title of an address to be given by James E. Trist, world traveler and lecturer, at the Community Church in Mill Valley at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Sponsored by the world service committee of the church, the program has been planned in conjunction with Bristol's speaking tour of the Bay Area. He will appear at Stanford University and the University of California prior to his return to Philadelphia where he is associated with American Friends Service Committee.

Bristol's knowledge of Far Eastern affairs was gained during the two years he worked as director of the Quaker International Center in Delhi, India. Last summer he visited Japan where he acted as consultant to two international student seminars, sponsored by AFSC in that country.

Revival Continues

The fall revival campaign at Southern Marin Assembly of God church in Mill Valley started last Tuesday and will continue through Nov. 29, according to Pastors J. C. Walton and Don McMurray.

Grace Lutheran Church To Install Its Pastor

The congregation of Grace Lutheran Church, Novato, will have special cause to give thanks at their Thanksgiving Day service at 9 a.m. Thursday when Rev. Arthur Koehler, commissioned missionary to Novato five years ago by the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, will be installed as the church's permanent pastor.

The introduction rite will be conducted by circuit counselor, Rev. Elmer F. Muhl, of Terra Linda.

Rev. Koehler was unanimously called as regular pastor to Grace Lutheran Church by the voters' assembly of the congregation, Nov. 2.

"This vote of confidence by my people removes me from the hook of uncertainty and suspense and places me in a more orderly and practical position where, with the Lord's blessing, both pastor and members should be able to accomplish greater things than heretofore," says Rev. Koehler.

The pastor, born in Saskatchewan, Canada, attended Canadian schools and was graduated cum laude in 1939 from Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill., where he had been president of his class for six of seven years.

He began his ministry in Texas and held two parishes until called to Eureka in 1951. Under his pastorate there, a new church edifice was constructed and Redeemer congregation of Arcata was established.

On Sept. 26, 1954, Rev. Koehler was commissioned missionary to Novato, where Rev. George C. Jacobsen of San Rafael had conducted church work among Lutherans since 1951.

The congregation voted on a name, formed articles of incorporation, drafted a constitution, and within 10 months after the new pastor's arrival began the erection of a church edifice on July 9, 1955. After the passing of another 10 months, the church at 1787

Hayden Custody Hearing Delayed; Ex Wife's Lawyers Fail To Appear

LOS ANGELES (UP) — Seafaring actor Sterling Hayden must appear in court Tuesday for a battle with his former wife over custody of their four children.

The hearing was originally scheduled yesterday but was canceled when attorneys for Mrs. Betty De Noon Hayden failed to appear. Commissioner Clinton Rodda was considering a motion to hold the attorneys in contempt for their absence.

Rodda also had before him a request from Hayden to disqualify Judge Emil Gumpert. The case was initiated by Mrs. Hayden when the actor took their children on a sea voyage from Sausalito to Tahiti against a court order last January. He had custody of the children but had been ordered not to take them because his 60-year-old schooner and the journey were considered dangerous.

The muscular 43-year-old actor told a press conference yesterday he had decided to abandon his Hollywood film career during the trip, which he called "the best year of my life."

He said he planned to enter the ship chartering business when he clears himself of the custody battle and contempt charges for making the voyage.

GIRL

(Continued from page one) on her. Not expected to live. Not able to feed. A cleft palate. A collapsed lung which required oxygen for the first four months of her life, which was spent in a friendly but impersonal hospital.

"Then she came home. No child in this world had better or more devoted care, as we started our struggle to correct her inherent handicaps.

"After three major operations and four years of speech therapy, Lorna could now speak ALMOST as well as a normal 8-year-old second grader, which she now was. She was ready to live now, being able to eat, breathe and speak for herself, which she now can't.

"Lorna was a happy carefree soul, generous, kind and friendly to all, showing little restraint in any matter.

"Now her real troubles began. A few of her playmates noticed her nasal sound and thought it fun to imitate. This brought her home many times crying and mad at the world. No amount of consoling or interceding ever succeeded in healing this wound and this she was to bear for the rest of her days.

"Hop to it to improve our environment we moved to Kentfield in 1955. Here she made many new friends but here also were new tormentors. Time went by without great incident and soon she was 12 years old by the calendar but only 9 or 10 physically. Lorna began to keep her problems to herself and we decided to get psychiatric help, which she was about to receive.

"She had auburn hair, hazel eyes, four and a half foot tall. Weighed 65 pounds and had not matured in any way. This was our little girl who left here Saturday morning promising to be home Sunday morning for church. This was the first Sunday she had missed church since she was 6 years old.

"May God rest her soul."

Guns In Car; 2 Men Jailed

Marin County sheriff's deputies arrested two San Rafael men early today after checking a car parked near the gravel pits in McNear's Brick Yard. They found — among other items — a loaded .22 rifle, a 12-gauge shotgun, a BB gun, and seven pairs of nylon stockings.

David E. Freeman, 22, of 43 Pacheco street, was booked on a charge of possessing a gun in a restricted area.

Frank Edward Molles of Route 1, Box 620, was booked on suspicion of burglary, vagrancy and drunkenness.

Deputies had seen Freeman in the car with a woman, and saw some other men run off as they approached. No charges were placed against the woman, who said she was being given a lift home.

Freeman said that Molles had taken the stockings from Smilin' Ed Woods service station at Second and Lincoln, San Rafael.

Woman Dies Of Burn Injuries

Mrs. Erlene Brooks, 29-year-old Marin City mother of five children, died at a local hospital yesterday from burns suffered in an accident at her home last month.

Mrs. Brooks, wife of Allen Brooks, a construction worker, suffered second- and third-degree burns on her chest, hands and neck when her robe caught fire from an electric heater.

She had lived at Apartment A-18, House 139, with her family after moving to Marin County from New Orleans three years ago.

Mrs. Brooks' surviving children are Hattie Marie, 9; Irvin, 7; Allen III, 10; Janice, 6, and Sylvia, 10 months. Also surviving is her mother, Mrs. Bertha Riley of New Orleans, and seven brothers and sisters in New Orleans.

Mrs. Brooks, a native of Louisiana, was a member of St. John's Missionary Baptist Church in San Francisco.

Funeral services are pending at Russell and Gooch mortuary, Mill Valley.

Mrs. Flora Smith Dies In Hospital

Graveside services will be held at 10 a.m. Monday in Mt. Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael, for Mrs. Flora Smith of Novato, who died yesterday at a local hospital after long illness. She was 74.

Mrs. Smith had lived with her daughter, Mrs. Kay B. Griffen at 103 Lobo Vista, Novato, for the past month since moving there from San Rafael. She had lived in Marin County for the past four years, coming to this county from San Francisco.

A native of Michigan, Mrs. Smith had once worked as a loan department clerk for the American Red Cross.

Funeral arrangements are being made by the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

Marin Woman's Brother Dies

David Wyckoff of San Francisco, brother of Mrs. Natalie W. Neher of Mill Valley, died Thursday at his home after a short illness. He was 43.

His father, Alfred C. Wyckoff, 84, a former Mill Valley resident, had died Tuesday in Sacramento.

He is survived by Mrs. Brown and two other daughters, Mrs. W. R. Pedersen of Waterloo, Iowa, and Mrs. Anthony Lake of Marion, Iowa, as well as a son, Warren Patterson of San Diego.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday in Macon, Mo.

Mill Valley Studies 8 Applications For Engineer Job

The Mill Valley City Council discussed the qualifications of eight candidates for the post of city engineer at a closed executive session last night, but made no decision on who will be hired, Mayor Robert D. Huber reported today.

Huber said the council went over the applications with City Engineer Albert H. Siemer, who will retire the first of the year. No applicants were present.

The city manager and councilmen will conduct personal interviews with the candidates, Huber said. One application, from Ecuador, probably is ruled out because of the requirement for a personal interview.

Hit-Run Forces Bus Off Road

A hit-and-run driver forced a Greyhound Bus off the road at midnight last night at Almonte boulevard and Rosemont, Tamalpais Valley, breaking off the bus' left rear bumper, the Marin County sheriff's office reported today.

Driver Richard D. Van Vleet of 714 Mission avenue, San Rafael, said the car crossed over the white line, forcing his bus off the street. As he attempted to avoid an accident, he sideswiped a telephone pole, breaking the bus' right rear bumper, Van Vleet reported.

Nine passengers were in the bus. There was no report of injuries.

Rites Held For Marinite's Mother

Funeral services were to be held today in Sonoma for Mrs. Maria Laurine Dal Poggetto, 64, of Sonoma, mother of Mrs. Eloise Tomasini of Nicassio.

Mrs. Dal Poggetto died Wednesday at her home. A Requiem Mass was said at St. Francis Solano Church. Interment was in Mountain Cemetery, Sonoma.

49er Title Dreams Reach Crucial Stage Tomorrow

By JACK HANLEY
IJ Sports Correspondent
BALTIMORE— By nightfall Sunday 49er dreams of an NFL title still could be sweet or they could begin to take on a nightmarish tinge.

A 49er victory over the defending champion Baltimore Colts not only would sweeten the dreams but the coldly realistic Western Division standings which now read: 49ers 6-2, Colts 5-3.

The Colts are favored by seven points to pull into a 6-3 tie with the league leaders who were out in front by two games until they bumped into the Chicago Bears at Wrigley Field last Sunday.

Kickoff time is 2 p.m. (11 a.m. Pacific Standard Time) for the first meeting of the season between the 49ers and Colts. The scene for this "crucial" will be Baltimore Municipal Stadium with a capacity crowd of 55,000 predicted.

Red Hickey listed only one doubtful starter, Clyde Conner, who aggravated a pulled muscle in his left leg during the 14-3 loss to the Bears. Hickey said that if Conner is unable to do his usual chores at left end on the offensive team Fred Dugan or Dick Moegle will replace him.

It seemed that everyone on the offensive team tailed off together against the Bears although a splendid defensive performance by the Bears had more than a little to do with holding J. D. Smith and Joe Perry to 81 yards rushing.

The Colts have even bigger defensive giants than the Bears. They plan the same kind of treatment for Smith and Perry. The Colt line — Gino Marchetti, Daddy Lipscomb, Art Donovan and Don Joyce—is formidable. The linebackers — Dick Szymanski, Bill Pelling-ton and Don Shinnick—are just as tough.

If the 49er forward wall doesn't block any better for Smith and Perry than it did against the Bears, the two 49er work horses won't get far against the Colts.

That will force Y. A. Tittle to take the air route and YAT hasn't been doing too well with his passes lately. He threw a couple of real wild ones against the Bears. And his substitute John Brodie wasn't much better last Sunday. Together they pitched five interceptions.

Hickey displayed angry displeasure at Tittle's performance by yanking him at the outset of the Bear game and not sending him back to work until the fourth quarter. However, Tittle will be the starter against the Colts.

There is no question who the Colt quarterback will be—Johnny Unitas. His passing is as sharp as ever and his favorite targets still are the same—Lenny Moore, operating out of the flanker post, and ends Jim Mutscheller and Ray Berry.

To keep the 49er defense honest, Unitas has fullback Alan Ameche for up-the-middle shots.

Thus far, the 49er defense has held all opponents, except Green Bay, under 20 points. The Packers got 21, just enough for a 21-20 win.

If Ed Henkle, Leo Nomellini, Monte Clark, Charlie Krueger, Matt Hazeltine and the rest of the defensive men do as well against the Colts, it again will be up to Tittle & Company to finish the job.

Aussies Cop Canada Cup Golf Title

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australia's Peter Thomson and Kel Nagle won the Canada Cup golf title by 10 whopping strokes over the United States today, but Canada's Stan Leonard beat out Thomson in a dramatic extra-hole playoff for the individual crown.

The second successive playoff in individual competition became necessary when Thomson and Leonard finished in a 72-hole tie at 275 after Thomson missed a 14-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

On the 424-yard extra hole both had good drives. Leonard left his approach shot just on the fringe of the green 30 feet from the pin. Thomson was wide about 25 feet over a small hump. Leonard putted to within six inches for a par 4. Thomson chipped. The ball skimmed nine feet past the cup and his putt curled under the cup's lip and stayed out.

HISTORY REPEATS
Thus history repeated itself in this international competition.

Leonard won the individual crown in 1954 at Montreal, Canada, when Thomson and Nagle won the team crown for Australia.

America's Sam Snead and Cary Middlecoff, who dropped out of contention Friday, climaxed their campaign with a pair of even-par 70s to eke out second place from Canada with a 573.

Towel Makes Big Hit In U.S. Debut, Beats Matthews

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Towel can come back anytime. The former British Empire lightweight champ from Johannesburg, South Africa made a hit last night in winning a split decision over Philadelphia's Len Matthews in his United States debut.

It wasn't Towel's victory that inspired the enthusiasm. In fact, there were many who thought Matthews deserved an edge.

The thing that caught the crowd's fancy at Madison Square Garden was Willie's skill in avoiding a knockout after being knocked down twice in the eighth round. Under New York rules, it is an automatic TKO when a fighter is down three times in one round.

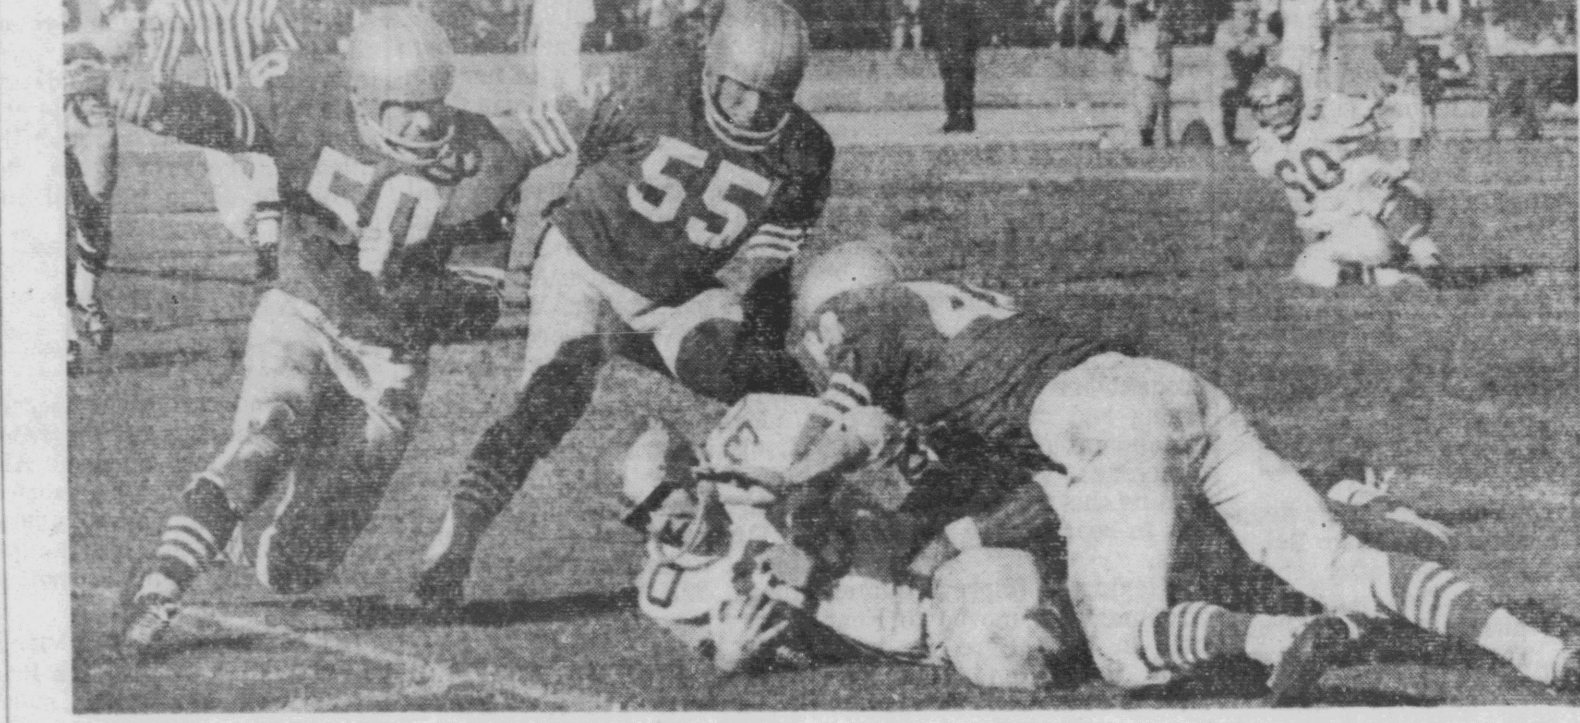

"I knew what I was doing all the time," said Willie later. "I knew about the three-knock-down rule. When I got up the second time I said to myself, "He's not going to get me. I'm going to run."

In the ninth Towel boxed his way out of trouble after a heavy body barrage. All night long he stuck an annoying jab in Matthews' face and kept dropping an overhand right to the jaw or bringing up a right uppercut to counter Len's furious advances.

Both Referee Harry Ebbets (5-4-1) and Judge Artie Aidaia (6-3-1) voted for Towel. Judge Ray Kozak had it 5-5 in rounds but voted for Matthews on points 9-5. The AP card was 5-4-1 for Towel.

Towel, 139½, was clever. No. question about that. He didn't carry too much thunder in his punch. Perhaps he had trained down too fine. Matthews, 136½, was the slugger, always moving to the attack. Too often he missed fire.

Marin Loses Final Tilt—A Thriller

Marin Catholic's Wildcats unleashed a crowd-pleasing aerial circus but fell one point short of upsetting the Riordan Crusaders last night at Kentfield in a thrilling climax to the 1959 local high school football season.

The final score of 13-12 was in jeopardy right up to the last play of the game as the spunky Wildcats were on Riordan's 10-yard line when the clock ran out. Four last minute Marin passes fell incomplete, but the crowd was in a frenzy as each pass was batted around like a volleyball, touching two and three players before falling incomplete.

Reasoning that a running game would be inept against the large Riordan line, Marin Coach Mike Davlin had his Wildcats attack from a deep spread formation with Quarterback Ron Blum in the tailback spot and the emphasis on passing. Blum threw 35 aeriels and completed 15 for 232 yards and two touchdowns.

The scores were on a nine-yard pitch to Doug Wilson and 55-yard screen pass play to Blake Rodgers. However, pass-

New L.A. Pro Grid Team Doesn't Have A Coach Anymore

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles' entry in the new American Professional Football League doesn't have a team or a ballpark.

But it did have a coach—until yesterday.

General Manager Frank Leahy said Bob McBride has changed his mind about taking the head coaching job with the Los Angeles Chargers and that he released McBride from his agreement.

Leahy said no announcement of a coaching appointment will be made until the American League player draft, which starts Monday, is over.

Giants' Spring Schedule Favors 'Little Guys' In Fringe Areas

A new shuffle in spring training unfolds for the S.F. Giants in 1960.

No more junkets through Texas, Florida and half way across the continent.

It is, to say the least, quite unusual. Only 26 exhibition games are to be played, representing a curtailment of at least 50 per cent over past seasons.

If you ask me it's the greatest thing the Giants or any other major league club could do. I mean to take the club in the spring to such towns as Bakersfield, Fresno, Sacramento and San Diego. It serves to repay these so-called "fringe areas" for their hearty and steady support of the Giants in the past two seasons.

All games between the Giants and other major league clubs will be played in Arizona or California.

Last spring attendance at Phoenix, Tucson, Mesa, and Scottsdale were quite sparse. Arizona isn't very baseball-minded.

ANYTHING at Bakersfield, Fresno, Sacramento or San Diego has to be an improvement over last year's attendance mark.

But I believe that Horace Stoneham, Giant owner, intends to show Californians on the fringe of San Francisco that he really appreciates the whole-hearted support of so many small areas, in and near the main base of operations—San Francisco.

Fresno, in particular, deserves to see the Giants. Each week the past two seasons, bus loads of fans have traveled to S.F. to see the Giants in action. Now they get a sneak preview of the club before the home-

COP DOWNS SPARTANS

Bass Scores 3 TDs In College Finale

STOCKTON (AP) — Sparkling Dick Bass, a halfback who rises to the occasion, led College of the Pacific to a 20-7 victory over arch-rival San Jose State last night.

The Vallejo flash tallied all three of the Tiger touchdowns as he closed his collegiate career. Bass drew a standing ovation from the crowd of 14,000 as he trotted off the field.

A year ago, Bass turned in a great game against Fresno State in COP's final 1958 tilt and it earned him the triple crown of college football—the national titles in scoring, rushing and total offense.

It wasn't until after that game a year ago that anyone but Bass' coaches and teammates knew he had been hobbled by an injured big toe for a week and could hardly put on his left shoe.

Bass has been hampered by injuries throughout his career at COP but he's usually been available when the chips are down. This year he's been slowed by a painfully bruised left side but going into last night's game he had still picked up enough yardage to rank fourth among the nation's rushers.

He picked up 62 yards in 18 carries against the Spartans. The average was 3.5 a crack—not much for Bass—but included his scoring bursts of 10, 9 and 3 yards.

San Jose couldn't shove its way onto the scoreboard until the Tigers led 20-0. The Spartans finally generated a seven-play, 68-yard drive that culminated in a 16-yard touchdown pass from Emmett-Lee to Mac Burton.

Sharing the credit with Bass was a sturdy Tiger line that limited the San Jose running attack to a net of 10 yards.

Bass was the Los Angeles Rams' first draft choice after his great 1958 season.

Rosburg, Venturi Challenge Leader In Almaden Golf

SAN JOSE (AP)—Two tournament-wise pros were threatening to close in on Jimmy Clark today as the 72-hole Almaden Open Golf Tournament began its second half.

The veteran Los Angeles professional cut par for the second day yesterday to take the half-way lead at 138 for 36 holes.

But Clark's 71 was not up to his five-under-par 67 of Thursday and allowed Bob Rosburg and Ken Venturi to come charging into contention with 68's.

Rosburg trails Clark by just two strokes. Amateur Bob Wagner, a San Jose sharpshooter, is a stroke behind Rosburg with 141 and then comes Venturi with 142.

The pressure appeared to be on the leader—Clark's finishes rarely match his starts.

5 Giants Picked By Coaches On New Loop's 'Dream Team'

BY JIM GILMARTIN
I-J Sports Editor

Redwood High School's undefeated champions dominate the 1959 All-Marin County Athletic League football squad with five players honored on the team of 13.

This was announced yesterday by the MCAL coaches' association which selected the dream team. Thirteen players were honored because of a tie in the balloting at two positions—end and center. The coaches did not select a second team or honorable mention list.

Novato, surprise team of the league, landed three players in the select group. Tamalpais had two and San Rafael, Marin Catholic and Drake one each.

Redwood's All-Leaguers include Fullback Sam Williams, Halfback Curtis Embry, Guard Rick Weil, Center Eric Lindner and End Mike Hoffman. Lindner tied in the balloting with Marin Catholic's Pat Casey and Hoffman finished in a deadlock for the end position with Bill Collins of Drake and Bob Senecal of Novato.

Otherwise, the honorees were clear-cut selections at their positions, including Bob Hector of Tamalpais at guard, Hans Lindholm of Novato and Kent Francisco of San Rafael at tackle, Jud Bird of Novato and Ray Edwards of Tamalpais in the backfield.

Three S.R. Stars Named On Anal's All-Foe Squad

Three members of the San Rafael Bulldogs were named to the 1959 Anal's High School All-Opponent Team, including one first team selection, fullback Travis Key, who received 250 out of a possible 280 points.

Tackle Kent Francisco was named to the second team behind Dennis Barbeiri of Montgomery and Max Newberry of Napa, who received 270 and 200 points respectively to Francisco's 170.

Tackle John Cuthbert received honorable mention with 35 votes.

Drake High School Season Basketball Tickets On Sale

Drake High School basketball season tickets—good for 12 games at the bargain price of $3—go on sale Monday to parents and other Drake backers.

The first home game is at 7 p.m. Dec. 4 against St. Ignatius of San Francisco.

Harry Sannar of San Anselmo, president of the Drake Benchwarmers, pointed out the tickets include membership in the Benchwarmers, a parents' group lending aid to the high school's program through fundraising for athletic awards and academic scholarships.

The tickets will be available through Benchwarmer members and through the Drake athletic department.

Interested parents were urged to attend the Benchwarmers' first basketball meeting of the year Monday at 8 p.m. in Room 219 at the high school, when the tickets will go on sale and Athletic Director George Corson and veteran Coach Bob Fitzhenry will discuss Drake's basketball prospects.

The Pacific Ocean covers about a third of the earth's surface. It is 60 miles wide at the Arctic Circle and 12,000 miles wide at the equator.

REPEAT PERFORMERS
Hector, a strong candidate for All-Northern California honors, and Francisco, the mighty Bulldog, are repeat selections on the All-County first team.

Others on the team who received honors in 1958 are Edwards and Embry, second team last year, and Weil and Casey, honorable mention.

The team was selected by the coaches and the balloting conducted by Commissioner V. W. "Vic" Jones.

THUMBNAILED SKETCHES of the All-MCAL squad:

REDWOOD

Hoffman, 6-2, 185, two-year letterman, junior, offensive end, linebacker. His ability at latter position was a strong point in Redwood's great defensive record of yielding only 19 points in five league games. Above average pass catcher.

Weil, 6-1, 195, three-year letterman, senior guard, equally outstanding on offensive and defense. Co-Captain and student body president.

Lindner, 6-3, 195, two-year letterman, senior center, defensive end, one of the best Marin performers at the middle spot in recent years. Also excels at basketball and discus.

Williams, 5-11, 185, two-year letterman, senior fullback-linebacker, rated by Coach Bob Troppman as "the heart and soul of our defense." Gained 312 yards on line smashes. Co-captain.

Embry, 5-7, 165, two-year letterman, senior halfback, second highest scorer in county with 52 points. Total yardage for season was 527 yards. Excelled on punt returns.

NOVATO

Bird, 5-10, 170, three-year letterman, senior, finest quarterback in league in passing, running, punting, faking and play selection, also was one of best defensive backs in league. An indication of his versatility came against Drake when he passed to one touchdown, ran to another, returned a kick-off 53 yards and made several key tackles.

Senecal, 6-1, 180, one-year letterman, senior end, caught only two passes in league play, but blocking and defensive ability won the respect of every opponent.

Lindholm, 6-4, 200, two-year letterman, senior tackle, one of toughest linemen in the county and a main reason for Novato's success. The tougher the going, the better he liked it.

TAMALPAIS

Hector, 5-11, 177, three-year letterman, senior guard, drew rave notices from opposing coaches after every game, particularly for his linebacking ability. Possesses keen play diagnostic abilities and cat-like pursuit.

Edwards, 5-11, 184, three-year senior letterman halfback, winner of virtually every offensive honor in the county, including scoring champ (60 points) and total yardage (801 on 68 carries). Tam's most versatile athlete, excelling also in basketball, track and field.

SAN RAFAEL

Francisco, 6-3, 226, three-year letterman, senior tackle, repeat performer on the all-county team, rated by Coach Dick Read as one of the greatest high school linemen he's ever seen. Most of San Rafael's yardage gained through his position: a defensive demon, usually found at the bottom of the pile.

MARIN CATHOLIC

Casey, 5-11, 205, three-year letterman, senior center, honorable mention last season. Rugged middle man in Coach Mike Davlin's outstanding line, excelled equally on offense and defense.

DRAKE

Collins, 6-3, 198, two-year letterman, junior end, one of the best receivers in the county and a bright spot in a winless Drake season. In league play Collins caught 17 passes for more than 200 yards and two touchdowns. Should have a brilliant season in 1960.

That group will go down in the record books as the first All-MCAL team in the history of the new league.

Redwood won the championship with a 5-0 league record and 8-0 including practice games. Tamalpais and Novato (each 3-2) tied for runner-up honors, followed by San Rafael and Marin Catholic (each 2-3) and Drake (0-5).

Hector, Edwards Win Tam's 'Most Valuable' Grid Honors

Guard Bob Hector and Halfback Ray Edwards this week were honored as Tamalpais High School's most valuable lineman and back for the 1959 season.

They and other outstanding performers were cited Wednesday night at the school's annual football awards dinner, sponsored by the Tam Boppers Club, at American Legion Hall in Mill Valley.

Center Dennis Reynolds was honored as the "most inspirational," player and sophomore quarterback Larry Hamilton the "most improved."

The junior varsity "most improved" award went to Marvin Ravely and "most inspirational" to Pete Hindley.

Tony Houston was named "most improved" freshman player.

Tam's head coach, Jim Hanretty, was presented with an achievement award by the National Pop Warner Football Conference for his cooperation with the junior program.

Main speaker at the awards dinner was Head Coach Joe Verducci of San Francisco State College's undefeated team.

Winter Yacht Series On Tap Tomorrow

By ALFRED MATSON

The sailors who love the going without regard for the calendar or lower temperature readings will head for the starting line off the Corinthian Yacht Club tomorrow to participate in the second of the club's five-race mid-winter series.

At 11:20 a.m. the first gun will sound as a warning notice to the Star, Acorn and Teak Lady entries that they have 10 minutes to trim ship and plot their opening gambits before the 11:30 start.

The other classes and divisions will follow at five minute intervals with the A, B and C divisions of the Cruising Club all hitting the line as the final starters at 12:30 p.m. From some of the scuttlebutt bandied about, there may be some surprising entries in Cruising Club A division. For one, Roger Towne's big yawl Ocean Queen V seems to be a definite starter.

IN KEEPING with a long-established custom, members of the San Francisco Y. C. deserted the waterways today and journeyed, via bus, to Stanford for the Big Game. And the adherents of the winning team will console the disciples of the losing team at a dinner at the clubhouse tonight.

NOW HEAR THIS. Next Monday, the 23rd, at 8 o'clock, Fred Lawton, sailing master of the America Cup defender Columbia, will show a colored film, the "Columbia Story" at the Corinthian Y. C. The film depicts the yacht from the keel laying, the ensuing construction, trial races and ultimate convincing defense of the Cup.

Following the picture he will discuss east coast racing, the use of electronic aids in navigation and other pertinent subjects. The program is open to the public and without charge.

Peter Fromliden of Owens Marin Yacht Sales is chiefly responsible for getting Lawton to Marin County. It should prove a highly interesting evening, and the price is right, too. Free!

MRGC Conservation Program Hailed By State Director

Members of the Marin Rod and Gun Club last night received a pat on the back and "keep up the good work" salute from the director of the California Department of Fish and Game.

Making his first appearance before the state's largest sportsmen's organization, Director William E. Warne praised the MRGC for its "genuine interest in conservation" and "teamwork with the Department of Fish and Game."

Warne cited the club's series of conservation lectures last fall as an outstanding public service. Hailing the program, he commented: "History teaches that an informed public is more apt to make the decisions that will contribute the greatest benefit to the greatest number. I am finding that we have a great need, in the field of fish and game, to get the necessary conservation information to our public, who must make the decisions which determine the future of our wildlife resources."

He urged the club of 2,000 members to "continue the good work you have started in creating and maintaining an alert and informed public throughout your area."

Warne also cited the Marin club's many accomplishments, singling out the completion of the Wildlife Conservation Board's boat launching ramp at Tomales Bay and the proposed Petaluma Creek access project. "All of these accomplishments," he stated, "have been characterized by the persistent hard work of many of your club members and by your willingness to sit down with us to discuss the problems and find the solutions that will be of the greatest benefit to the sportsmen and conservationists of Marin County and to the county's Wildlife resources."

The director also discussed such problems as deer management, striped bass program and the silver salmon fishery in Lagunitas Creek.

His comments: Deer Management—"California hunter success is lower than in any other western state, despite the fact we have the most deer and most deer hunters. This is attributable to the fact that other states shoot numbers of antlerless deer while we do not. Too few people realize that deer in overcrowded ranges will die of starvation and disease unless the herds are balanced with their food supply. The only answer your Department has found is harvesting the surplus, on a controlled basis and then improving the habitat, where possible."

Striped Bass—"Almost all of California's striped bass fishing is dependent on a population inhabiting the San Francisco Bay and Delta areas. We are faced with the problem of trying to maintain satisfactory striped bass fishing in spite of increasing angling pressure and a deteriorating environment. . . . The Department is conducting an important research program designed to define the effects of angling pressure and the environment on the bass population so that we will know the steps to take to maintain angling at a satisfactory level."

Silver Salmon Fishery—"We know your club has worked to preserve and maintain the fishery in the Lagunitas Creek drainage and you have supported the Department's efforts toward this goal. Recently access to the White House Pool area, the major stretch of good salmon fishing water on this whole drainage, has been endangered by a land reclamation project. But your regional manager here, Bob Jones, now tells me that a satisfactory agreement appears to have been reached and only finalization by the attorney general's office and the lawyers on the other side is required. Only a strong local group such as yours can marshal the necessary public support to see that the public's interest and resources are adequately protected."

Warne's speech highlighted the club's monthly business meeting at its Pt. San Quentin clubhouse.

No Hike In Cal Fishing, Hunting Licenses: Warne

SACRAMENTO (AP) — There will be no increase in California's fishing and hunting license fees "in the foreseeable future."

That's the word from William E. Warne, state fish and game director. He said no increase is necessary or contemplated.

Warne said there were reports that licenses would be boosted in the next year or so because of lack of funds but that this wasn't true at all.

"The department's surplus has increased materially to more than 4 million dollars since the increase two years ago," he said.

When Should Girls Start Dating? It's Tough Question To Answer

"Every girl I know," a teenager writes, "has troubles with her parents over dating. Either her folks won't let her date, they say she stays out too late, or they object to the boy she goes with."

"I'm a girl of 14. Is it a sin for me to have dates? Why do my parents think I'm going to be bad the minute I get out of their sight? Are they afraid I'll do what they did? We teenagers trust you. Our parents do too. Will you give us some suggestions about dating?"

I'll try. It's no sin to have dates. But the matter is complicated.

In some neighborhoods the girls of 14 have dates and no one thinks anything of it. In other neighborhoods they're felt to be too young. Trustworthy girls can date earlier than wild ones.

A safe rule for parents is to let their responsible girls start dating good boys about the time the other nice kids in their gangs begin going out. They shouldn't let their girls be the first, or make them be the last. They should approve the boys their girls go out with. Parents often must say "no."

Their girls must obey. Necking is the chief source of trouble. Teen-age instincts are easily aroused. Good kids may do bad things impulsively. Therefore I advise against necking.

Parents' anxiety does not mean that they themselves were wild or that they distrust their daughters. It means they are aware of the risks. They have the job of protecting their girls. It isn't easy.

Estate Style Home

On Secluded 1/2 Acre

Owner has asked us to quickly sell his expansive home, beautifully built, in this wooded but convenient setting. Rare construction features big rooms and nearly mansion like qualities. Basically the house has 3 bedrooms, 2 baths plus a completely private study-den. The living room has also ballroom proportions, and the whole residence possesses quality and dignity. It's so unusual, so private, yet so close to all conveniences that we want you to see and make an offer on the asking price of $27,500. Plenty of room for horses, pool or tennis court. We have a feeling you will make the "buy of your life" here!

Incidentally, adjacent acreage near this level site is available rather reasonably.

Directions: Follow Sir Francis Drake Blvd. West toward Manor, then turn left at Rubini's Restaurant on Olema rd. Follow 3 blocks to Bothin to signs and arrive.

Stripper Jailed

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Stripper Candy Barr was jailed here as a fugitive, but ex-mobster Mickey Cohen promised to have her released today even though "I don't want any part of her."

The dancer, facing a 15-year prison term on a narcotics conviction in Texas, was arrested yesterday at the El Rancho Vegas Hotel, where she was appearing as the star of a floor show.

She had been free on a $15,000 appeal bond posted by Cohen, her former suitor, but Cohen's lawyer, Melvin Belli, withdrew the bond.

Bridges' Union Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said today it is investigating whether any officers of Harry Bridges' West Coast dock union are violating a new ban against Communists or convicted criminals holding union office.

Bridges' union became a target under the new labor law after he refused a request by Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell to report on his union's compliance with the new labor law proviso.

Anti-Smut Drive

SARATOGA (UPI) — The sixth district of the California Parent-Teacher Assn. has announced that it will start a drive next month against pornography distributed through the mails and news stands.

Crisis For Brigitte

PARIS (AP) — Brigitte Bardot, who rose to stardom in the movies by taking off her clothes, has run into a crisis in her young career.

Her producer thinks the time has come for the "sex kitten" to put the accent on acting instead.

Miss Bardot doesn't like the idea.

"I shouldn't step out of the roles that the public likes," she said.

BY U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Lanza Children Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mario Lanza's four children are home again with the singer's widow.

The youngsters — ages ranging from 4 to 10 — greeted their mother nonchalantly at the airport last night and appeared puzzled about the fuss over their two-day trip to Chicago.

Betty Lanza reported the children kidnapped Thursday. But police said it was just a family misunderstanding.

Art Controversy

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Art experts on two continents were embroiled in controversy today over the authenticity of 10 so-called Renaissance masterpieces valued at eight to 10 million dollars.

The paintings were found in the home of a Pasadena television repairman.

"There is no doubt in my mind that seven of the 10 paintings I examined are genuine masterpieces," said art critic Amadore Porcella yesterday in Rome.

Taylor Curtis, of the Curtis Gallery in Pasadena, agreed that a few of the paintings he saw were "old—perhaps 16 or 17th century" but said they were not masterpieces.

Law Affects Pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — By March 16, all pilots—private or commercial — must know how to fly by instruments.

The new regulation was announced by the Federal Aviation Agency yesterday. The reason: There have been too many fatal accidents lately involving light planes and amateur pilots.

Cuba Oil Crackdown

HAVANA (AP) — The Cuban government today aimed another blow at foreign business interests by passing a stiff law that will force oil exploration and exploitation companies to work their claims or lose them.

The legislation, which follows a tough new minerals law, also sets production quotas for petroleum refineries. Affected primarily will be three big foreign operations—the American-owned Standard Oil and Texaco companies and the British-owned Shell, Ltd.

Rain In Fifth Day

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Steelworker Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Steelworkers Union has told the government it better get busy stockpiling steel for defense needs because the steel strike is likely to resume in late January.

Arthur J. Goldberg, union counsel, said the union wants to make it "perfectly plain" that, should the strike resume, any peril to the national safety will not be chargeable to the United Steelworkers of America.

HONOLULU (AP) — A rapidly filling lake of molten lava in Kilauea Iki crater was expected to reach the base of the fissure in the erupting volcano early today.

Mikoyan Boasts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan says the Soviet Union is preparing to increase its space missile lead over the United States by launching a rocket "to visit the sun."

Mikoyan, the highest Soviet official ever to appear in a Latin-American country, told a dinner given in his honor by city officials last night that the Soviet Union has surpassed the United States both in the scientific and in economic areas.

Warning On Heater

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Public Health Service has issued an urgent warning against a kind of bottled gas heater used in hunting and camping trailers. Apparently it has caused eight deaths in Michigan, officials said.

The heaters are called "Thrum Heaters," the health service said yesterday, and may bear the model number "8M" or "8MNS." It said a faulty design results in a quick buildup of lethal carbon monoxide in the small trailers in which they are used.

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — Joe Kittinger says his 15-mile parachute jump didn't scare him—he was too busy to worry.

Willis Gets Prison For Illegal Surgery

Dr. Jack Edward Willis, 42, Mill Valley obstetrician, left for the state medical facility at Vacaville last night to serve a two-to-five-year term for committing abortion.

Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court ordered a prison sentence despite a plea by the doctor and his attorney, Leslie Gillen, for probation.

Mrs. Josephine Willis, the doctor's wife who aided in the abortions, also drew a prison sentence. But the judge suspended it and put her on three years' probation on condition she serve six months in San Francisco County Jail. At the request of Gillen, the jail sentence on Mrs. Willis was stayed, pending an appeal. The judge gave her five days in which to raise $1,000 bail. She would then be allowed to remain free until the appeal is decided. If the appeal is denied, she must serve the six months.

The judge ordered her jail sentence to be served in San Francisco because Marin's jail facilities, especially for women, are not adequate.

Both the doctor and his wife were visibly shaken by the sentence. "I am not guilty. That's all I have to say," said Dr. Willis. He then walked downstairs to be booked at the jail before transfer to Vacaville.

Dist. Atty. William O. Weisich asked a prison sentence for both the doctor and his wife. The probation officer recommended prison for the doctor, and 90 days in jail for Mrs. Willis as a condition of probation.

"The judge declared that "due to the repeated nature of the offenses," he cannot put the doctor in the category of a first offender. The doctor was convicted of seven counts, and his wife of five counts.

Judge Keating ordered a prison sentence for the doctor on each count. The sentences are to run concurrently, which means two to five years in all.

On Mrs. Willis, the judge said a 90-day jail term as condition of probation is too lenient. "I'm going to double that and make it six months."

Parcel Post Rates Will Go Up Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parcel post rates will go up soon, but most likely after the Christmas mailing rush is over.

An 88-million-dollar-a-year increase was approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday. This averages to a 17.1 per cent boost over current rates.

The Post Office Department said it would announce next week when the new rates go into effect. Reports were that officials would give the public at least a 60-day notice.

The increases will vary according to the size of the package and the distance it has to go. Small items going a short way will shoulder the biggest boosts. And there will be reductions for some of the biggest packages heading for long trips.

Under the law, the postmaster general has to ask for an increase in parcel post rates whenever that aspect of the postal business is in the red.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield asked for the boosts a year ago when parcel post losses were coming to 88 million dollars a year.

U.S., Russia Sign New Pact For Cultural Exchanges

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union signed a new two-year cultural exchange agreement today that includes joint projects in peaceful uses of atomic energy.

It also sets up discussions for direct Moscow-New York air links, provides for radio and television program exchanges, and paves the way for the ultimate sending of the Red Army chorus to the United States in view of the U.S. Marine Band playing here.

The Marines are expected to be here during President Eisenhower's visit.

The agreement, second of its kind, provides for potentially thousands of Americans and Russians to exchange visits in 1960 and 1961 in art, educational, agriculture, industry and science fields.

MARIN ET CETERA

By Harry Craft

It Was Only A Weather Forecast, But It Sure Started Something

"WEEKEND will be sunny, but cooler, windy.

So read the weather report on this balmy Friday evening a short time ago. It was a front page headline but not particularly sensational. You'd pass it right by and look to see if there were any earthquakes today or how it was in Laos or was King Farouk going to visit Marin this winter.

I don't suppose the weather man thought it would start much of a controversy either. He probably checked his air currents and cumuli, and figured maybe he could stir up a mild breeze or something to change the monotony.

If it didn't work out that way not one in a thousand would hold him to it and he could always say he was talking about New Mexico at the time and the paper got it bawled up. Hardly anyone would give it much concern.

Hardly anyone, that is, except my wife.

"YOU BETTER put on an undershirt," she told me. "It's going to be cold and windy tomorrow. Probably one of those penetrating north winds."

"I don't need an undershirt," I said. "You know I never wear one until January. Sometimes not even then."

"Okay, but don't say I didn't warn you. Remember how it was the last time you got the sniffles."

"That was almost a year ago," I reminded her. "I'm a big boy now."

"Oh? I hadn't noticed."

This went on until I agreed to check the thermometer and if it went down below 60 degrees I'd wear an undershirt.

"You better do something about the plum tree," she said.

"What about the plum tree?" I asked, glad to have the subject changed.

"If there's going to be a wind those limbs ought to be cut. It wouldn't take much of a blow to break them off."

"Let them break," I said. "It will save me the trouble of cutting them. I wish the whole darned tree would come down. We never eat the plums anyway."

"I'll wake you up early in the morning."

"What for?"

"SO YOU can saw down the plum tree. You better dig out the stump, too. Otherwise suckers will start growing..."

"I'm not going to have time to cut down the plum tree," I said crabbyly. "I've got to wash the car."

This seemed to end the matter and we swapped newspaper sections.

"I was just thinking..." she began.

"I see where the foreign ministers may get together again," I broke in hastily, hoping she'd forget whatever it was she was thinking.

"... that tomorrow or Sunday we ought to drive to the city and see Aunt Edna."

"Why?" I asked, off guard. "No—don't tell me. I'll bet it has something to do with the weather."

"Well, she's getting old and everytime there's a north wind it dries up her sinuses and she has a hard time breathing. You can't tell what might happen at her age."

"Aunt Edna has been breathing through more north winds than either of us," I said. "Anyway what good will it do for us to go to the city? Your sister will let us know if anything happens."

"YOU'RE NOT very sympathetic. Now if it had been one of your relatives..."

"Okay, okay. Let's not start a family argument over an ill wind that hasn't blown yet. We'll go to the city. If it's serious I'll phone Sacramento and have them order a monsoon. Then maybe I can read the paper."

Please, Mr. Editor, after this could you maybe have Jim Gilmartin handle the weather reports? He could probably work them in somewhere between his column and John Connolly's Bullpen.

My wife hardly ever reads the sport page.

The Rollicking Crew Of The Swoose

Marin's 'Red' Varner Most Colorful Of That Devil-May-Care Air Group

By DONALD G. DAVIS

Three "old crates" from World War I landed in a field outside Somerset, Pa., in 1923, and Harold Varner climbed into one of them and took a ride.

Barnstorming pilots were landing in such little fields all over the nation, and Harold, like many a young man of 17, was ready for a thrill.

He liked the ride so well he joined the Air Corps and stayed in it and its successor, the Air Force for 28 years of duty.

That could be a lot of military men's story, abbreviated into a few pallid sentences, but add a peck of "red pepper" and you get an entirely different point of view.

The reason Varner got a ride in that "old crate" in the first place was because he was Red. That's what they called him back in Somerset, and that is what his friends, buddies and Air Force generals have always called him.

HIS RED hair, now faded and thinning at the age of 55, sets the tone of his personality. His use of the English language with ample sprinklings of Anglo-Saxon punchiness, and his disregard for rank, protocol and red tape earned him a reputation of straightforwardness, honesty and complete devotion to duty.

Red called generals by the first names, slapped them on the back, and asked why he didn't get promotions, while persons of lesser gaul, but of considerable more rank than Red, stood by quaking under their eagles and oak leaves.

His association with the B17 called the Swoose brought him national attention, and from that association he has culled so many anecdotes of color and humor that even a book written with the old plane as its background doesn't tell the whole story.

It is doubtful if the full story ever will be told. Red knows the story, but he will never finish telling it. There is too much of it, even for him, to wrap up. The story of the Swoose, named after a song popular during World War II, like Red Varner's story, is that of mankind and war—a story that is never ending.

The plane, one of the few to get out of Clark Field before the Japanese took over the Philippines and the only B17 from Clark to return to the U.S., bore a picture of the unreal animal for which it was named. The ungainly bird was half swan, half goose. There was a legend on the plane—"Will it fly?"

It flew! Part of its colorful history is Red's and part of Red's colorful history belongs to the Swoose. It was on this plane that he took command of everything the pilot would let him get away with and then some.

IT WAS ON this plane that Red, flouting rules and regulations, carried whisky into combat headquarters thus winning the friendly smiles of a general and enlisted men alike.

It was on this plane that

IN HIS SAN RAFAEL home Harold (Red) Varner goes through his collection of photographs that serve to bring back many fond memories of his colorful career in the Air Force and its predecessor, the Air Corps. During his years in service the light-hearted, likeable Red became a pal of many of the military's top officers. And they remain his friends today.

Red "sat down" an emissary of President Roosevelt's, who is now Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, of Texas, senate majority leader.

It was on this plane that Red helped cover the bullet holes with old tin tobacco cans, and refused to have the holes repaired when the plane once made a visit to the factory where it was built.

Red's way of life on the Swoose was only natural, for he acted out his part in the services the same way. He loved Hamilton Field (now Hamilton Air Force Base) and more than once wrangled a way to get stationed there. In all he served 17 years at the base, and from there made a host of friends in Marin County, where, now in retirement, he feels comfortably at home.

If Red didn't like what was going on, or didn't think he was getting a fair shake, he stomped right up to highest brass he could find and spilled his troubles. Once when he was threatened with drastic demotion at Hamilton he sought out the friendly aid of retired Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold at his ranch in the Sonoma Valley.

Arnold saw to it that Red got a new assignment with no loss of rank.

Red was born April 8, 1905, at Johnstown, Pa., about 60 miles east of Pittsburgh. His lumber merchant father died when he was 3, and seven years later Red went to live with an uncle, also in the lumber business, at Somerset.

TO HOLD HIM down to a cast of characters in the drama in which he has taken part would be like holding down an unfettered and kicking mule. Edith, his wife of six years (Red was married once before), says the reason Red has so many friends is because he is friendly. And it is simply that.

Today, his household consists of Edith and Edith's retired father, Ernest L. Titus. But friends in endless lists live throughout the world.

The cast of Swoose included many names, too, but those who played the leading roles, in addition to Varner, were Gen. George H. Brett, air commander under Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Pacific; Brett's operation's chief, Gen. Ralph Royce; Capt. Frank Kurtz, pilot of the Swoose; Capt. Harry Schrieber, navigator, and one of the first American's wounded in the Philippines; Charles Reeves, bombardier, and Rowland (Danny) Boone, gunner and aerial engineer.

Varner, Reeves and Boone were all master sergeants.

Later during a tour of the U.S. they were commissioned.

Boone retired a lieutenant colonel and lives in Novato where he sells insurance.

Reeves, also now a lieutenant colonel, is serving in Alaska and is due to retire soon. He formerly made his home in Novato.

Schrieber, too, is still serving with the Air Force.

Kurtz, now a colonel, serves with the Strategic Air Command. He was an Olympic diving champion.

ANOTHER person who figured prominently in the history of the Swoose was Milton MacAdams, Kurtz' co-pilot. He left the crew in the U.S., and later was killed testing a plane.

The Pennsylvania Dutchman (the V in Varner probably got that way from the American pronunciation of the Dutch W, and the name may have been Werner to begin with) started his career at Bolling Field near Washington, D.C., remaining there four years a member of the service squadron.

"We were known as the dog robbers to the chief of the Air Corps," Red said. "Any experimental plane was brought down to us for testing and administrative work. Planes were kept around there for a year or so before the government would accept them.

"I trained on the old Consolidated OX-5 at Bolling, and I also worked on Sikorskys, Fords, Douglasses and Fokkers.

"I helped overhaul the Ryan, that was (Charles A.) Lindbergh's The Spirit of St. Louis.

"This was after his hop over the Atlantic, and before he made a trip to Mexico.

"He used to come in there, and he got service just like anybody else. Lindbergh gave me a bawling out. I was with an alert crew assigned to take care of all visiting aircraft. Lindy was teaching his wife (Anne Morrow Lindbergh) to fly, and one day came in with a five-cylinder job.

"I HANDED him a form that all pilots had to sign and started to help his wife out of her parachute.

"Lindbergh told me to mind my own business. He said she could get out of her own chute because that was part of what she had to learn."

After Bolling Varner was out of the service but in the reserves for about a year and a half, and then went to the old Luke Field at Pearl Harbor where he ended another service stint in 1934. Later in the 30s Red was back in Hawaii where he met Amelia Earhart shortly before her last flight—the one from which she never returned—to the South Pacific. She gave him a flying helmet and a pair of goggles as souvenirs.

Back in San Francisco at the end of his first Hawaii trip, he yearned to get stationed at Hamilton Field. "It was a young field in those days and I wanted to grow with it," he said. "But they told me I was too old to enlist there." Red was in his late 20s.

"So I went over to Crissie Field in San Francisco and started looking people up.

"I was told that if I enlisted there I'd be joining an old soldiers' home.

"Then I ran into a major I knew in Washington, D.C. (Red, throughout his service career was always "running into" someone he knew, someone who could help him) and he took me to a general who got me an enlistment at March Field. I was assigned to a pursuit group there."

IT WAS almost as though Red planned it that way. What should be at March Field but the 7th Bombardment Group and it was due to be transferred to Hamilton. Red wrangled an assignment with the group's 11th Bombardment Squadron. He was sent to Hamilton as the outfit's advance man. He arranged for quarters and rations and when the squadron arrived on Thanksgiving Day, 1934, Red had already earned himself two three-day passes.

It was in those days that he began to make friends in Marin. After a rather bitter experience of being accused of a wrongdoing at Bolling by one of his pals, Red had decided that henceforth he should "solo"—he would have friends, but to heck with the

"buddy system."

One evening after Red had been to a film in San Rafael he decided to get off the bus at the Le Chateau restaurant north of San Rafael instead of going straight back to the base. His friendship with Marinites started there. After helping do the dishes, Red got a job. Eventually he put in a lot of his off-duty hours there and became a trusted employee.

"There was a four-piece orchestra," Red said. "I used to work and then I would tap dance a little. I learned that out in the islands. They found they could trust me completely with the receipts too."

Before he could finish his enlistment at Hamilton, he was shuttled back to Hawaii, this time at Hickham Field.

"I didn't want to go, but I was one of only two propellor men with the schooling that was needed on our B18s.

"But in those days you could buy out of the service, and in 1938 that is just what a bunch of us did. We were living in tents, fighting coral dust and using an old school house as a mess hall."

BACK IN MARIN Red took up quarters over Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael, working for the Keatons and for the county surveyor.

But a few months later Red was called back to the colors, and his friends, fearing he might be gone for a long time, gave him a big farewell party. Red went as far as Monterey, turned around and came back to Hamilton where he was assigned to the 35th Pursuit Group.

One day Red was told volunteers were needed for duty in the South Pacific. All he could find out about the mission was the code name PLUM. As far as Red was concerned that meant Manila and the Philippines. And he wasn't far wrong. He helped round up others for the "volunteer" unit.

The outfit sailed out the Golden Gate on the President Jackson. Two days out the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. A lumber schooner on the Jackson's course was sunk. The ship turned back. The President Polk, which Red said had been readied for a cruise, was taken over as a troop ship. They sailed again, landing in Australia in January, 1952.

It was not until the following year that he met the Swoose, and in the interim Red had gone to Java as a volunteer and returned.

The planes that were part of the fighter force to which Red was assigned in Java were knocked out. As Allied efforts on the island were coming to an end and the Japanese made landings, Red and others were told to get out the best way they could.

From the base at Surabaia they formed a truck convoy and went across the island to Jogjakarta. "I took 30 men across with ammunition trucks and machine guns," Red said. "When we got there the Yanks were gone. We hid our stuff under coconut trees. But I knew something was wrong. It was too quiet. Then we heard the drone of a Jap Zero. It came over and pep-

Statue Keeps Alive Memory Of Marin High Friend

She Never Studied There, But It Was 'Her' School

By GENEVIEVE FITZHARRIS

A statue of The Madonna stands on the Marin Catholic High School campus as a remembrance of a young Marin woman who, while she never attended that school, is still regarded by the faculty and student body as one of their own.

Presented by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Tobener of Larkspur in memory of their daughter, Mrs. Patricia Ann Tobener Guglielmo, the statue was dedicated last spring.

It is the hope of the Tobeners that the statue will not only keep alive in succeeding generations of students the memory of their daughter and her love for Marin Catholic High, but that it will also serve as an inspiration to those young pupils of the future.

They hope that as Marin Catholic students pass the statue they will pause to share a moment with the Blessed Mother and confide their joys and troubles, worries and ambitions, yearnings and weaknesses — and to say a prayer of thanks for their successes.

AS PREVIOUSLY noted, Patricia, herself, was not a student of Marin Catholic, although she had watched eagerly the construction of the school and had hoped to be able to graduate from it.

Instead her graduation in 1949 was from St. Anselm's High School — just one year too early for Marin Catholic which did not open its doors until the following year.

Pat was an active student at St. Anselm's and served as vice president of the student body during her senior year.

But in heart and spirit she belonged to Marin Catholic, too. Those ties were tightened when she followed and assisted with the activities and enthusiasms of her brother, Ralph, and two sisters, Marilyn and Irene, while they attended the school.

Her youngest sister, Marty, is a Marin Catholic High senior this year.

Pat was born June 26, 1931, in San Francisco. She attended St. Monica's and the Academy of the Preservation before the family moved to Marin.

A GOOD student, she was particularly gifted in art and music. But she had a sharp mind that could cope with the sciences as well as the arts. And her family remembers that after finishing a piece on the piano, a water color, or a poem, she could sit down and, with equal enjoyment, solve a complicated mathematical problem.

In 1950 she married Bernard Guglielmo, also of Marin County, ending a brief business career with the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco. Three children, Joey, Dan and Gina, were born in the succeeding years to make Pat's home life complete.

Death ended her life just shy of her 25th birthday on June 24, 1956. But it was preceded by two years of illness and suffering, during which Pat's two outstanding attributes—courage and cheerfulness—made an indelible impression upon all who came in contact with her.

Her courageous submission to God's will during her long period of suffering when she knew her days were numbered won the admiration of all.

"Pat never lost her sense of humor," a friend says.

WROTE ONE of those persons who knew her best, her sister, Marilyn:

"She was as good a mother as she was a daughter, sister, a wife or friend. Then, as she accepted everything else in life, with patience, forbearance and humility, she accepted the knowledge that the finest doctors were helpless battling a fatal disease. Pat's life was not spectacular. She did-not accomplish any great feat. She lived—she died—but her quiet influence on people's lives was in a sense miraculous."

Pat's family and friends are hopeful that the statue of Our Lady will serve to continue to make that influence felt by generations of Marin youths to come. It will also serve to keep alive the memory of a personable young woman who was never a student at, but always a friend, of the school they, too, love.

SAN ANSELMO'S William Torrance is an intent man when he is at work in the rear workroom of his combination studio, gallery, and store in the Hub City. It is there that he conserves and restores fine paintings, brought to him by art owners from a wide area. He is a skilled practitioner of the difficult and highly technical craft. (Independent-Journal photos)

He Protects Marin's Fine Art

San Anselmo Man Helps Owners Conserve Their Valuable Paintings

By RANDALL GOULD

A newly executed oil painting looks fresh and shining indeed. Relatively, it is; but technically it isn't.

Says a Marin authority:

"Every oil painting begins to decay from the first day after it has been created."

This is a primary reason why William Torrance prospers in his studio-shop at 341 San Anselmo avenue, San Anselmo.

Thought by many a highly skilled restorer, Torrance prefers to regard himself as mainly a "conservator," although on occasion he does necessary restoration work as well.

In a county as culture-saturated as Marin, there is plenty of engrossing work to be done, merely to preserve fine oil paintings found in homes both elaborate and simple throughout this area.

TORRANCE doesn't limit himself to oils, as a matter of fact—he also copes with watercolors, prints ("very technical and difficult work, he calls the latter) and even photographs.

His establishment is similarly varied and on its ground floor front may be found customers seeking artists' materials, framing for pictures and other things, while upstairs is a gallery in which he holds a monthly exhibition of paintings. Artists are booked as far ahead as next April for this coveted showing, he says.

But where Torrance is most often to be found, busiest and very intent, is in the back portion of the ground floor where his skilled creative personal work is done.

For what he considers a thoroughly sound and not selfish reason, Torrance doesn't discuss in too much detail everything he does or how he does it. The reason is that work of this type is not a "do-it-yourself" project for the amateur.

Yet, he says, many owners of fine paintings carelessly undertake such operations as washing them with soap and water—a method calculated to ruin them as a rule.

"No soap and water should be used by the eager housewife under any circumstances," says he. "People should be warned that if water gets into the glue sizing underneath—well, the painting is gone, that's all."

"ON THE OTHER hand every owner of paintings should realize that good maintenance calls for careful dusting and for maintenance of normal temperatures without undue moisture in the air, and especially none condensing on walls behind.

In spite of the slow and inevitable deterioration inherent in paintings, Torrance feels that "if a painting is properly varnished and looked after, there should be nothing to worry about for years."

Marin is mercifully without sulphur fumes often hanging in air of the eastern cities, he points out. Superficial dirt

ULTRA-VIOLET RAYS aided Torrance in detecting the ailment of this painting, brought to him for treatment after flecking development. Torrance found that the painting had been retouched at some time in the past by a person without the necessary skill for that job. And the old varnish hadn't been fully removed at the time. The "stripping down" of the painting and the complete removal of the varnish for the "cure" will take a year, he estimates.

Hub Man Skilled At Restoring Fine Paintings

and especially oil in the air may overlay a painting gradually, however.

Torrance brought out a picture from Scotland, property of Mrs. William Minnes of Kentfield and "by an unknown but good artist of the English school, showing a young child. He termed the work on this "a comparatively simple job" starting with a thorough cleaning, but soon developing minor complications because the paint was flaked away at the edge and some parts of the picture were not clearly visible.

In this case while major complications were lacking, not only conservation but some restoration work was required, especially about the child's eyes.

No previous retouching was found and the picture was in its original state, but dirty and requiring carefully chosen solvents.

Really skilled undertakings depend on the findings of ultra-violet rays, even the novice quickly saw dark patches coinciding with the areas of flecking.

The answer? Retouching at some past time by a person lacking in either know-how or care.

Torrance's diagnosis was that perhaps the old varnish hadn't been fully removed previously. But at any rate he must now "strip down" to remove varnish completely, and he estimates that it will take about a year to restore fully.

Marin Arts & Artists

While he clearly regards restoration as a creative art, Torrance warns: "The restorer must not project himself or try to improve a painting in any way. It is better to underdo than to overdo."

Ultra-violet rays are at times good detectives able to discover that another older and perhaps far more valuable picture lies beneath the surface of the one visible to the naked eye. In case of any such discover, Torrance can take the painting to San Francisco and have it even more deeply probed by X-rays.

Thirty years of Torrance's life, half his present span, have been spent in Marin County.

He was born in Chicago but taken to Montana before he was able to register his surroundings, living in Billings with his parents till he was eight years old and then going to New York where he stayed through his next 20 years.

HIS FATHER was an architect, for years serving the National Biscuit Co. in this capacity. Torrance studied fine arts and architecture at Columbia, then was graduated from the Beaux Arts School of Design in New York — this school, like Torrance's own architectural aspirations, proving a casualty of depression years. He also went to the Pennsylvania Academy School of Fine Arts in Philadelphia.

But as architecture seemed impractical in the depression period he came to Marin County and began work as a commercial artist, serving Standard Oil in San Francisco but quitting to open a studio with retail sales in 1930.

It is his growing reputation which has brought business. "The thing is a matter of referral altogether," Torrance explains.

And his artistry and craftsmanship seem to be serving as the kind of mousetrap which brings and also catches customers.

The Decision Every Pilot Hopes He Never Has To Make

By CARLETON WILLIAMS

For the sake of argument, imagine a hypothetical situation in which you are flying a jet plane sent out to intercept an enemy aircraft loaded with H-bombs and hell-bent for paydirt, namely dumping his load on the Bay Area.

After a running battle, you have fired the last of your armament.

With the enemy coming in toward his target at roughly 12 miles a minute, time has run out on your chances of hopping home for more ammunition.

Now ask yourself the hypothetical question:

WOULD YOU take the chance of ramming that enemy with your own plane—a chance which might easily mean trading your life for those of thousands of your friends and fellow Americans?

The question, when put to a pair of Hamilton Air Force Base airmen, brought a simple and direct answer:

"Yes."

"This is no new question for us," said Capt. Charles E. Burger, a 32-year-old pilot of 10 years experience. "It is something that has been discussed frequently—ever since the arrival of the A-bomb."

Equally quick with an affirmative answer was Lt. Virgil G. Heminger, a quiet-spoken father of two small boys who entered the service 12 years ago as an enlisted man and who now serves as radar operator in the F-101 Voodoo

STRIDING ACROSS the Hamilton Air Force Base flight line toward their F-101 Voodoo jet, preparatory to taking off on a patrol flight into the wild blue yonder, are Lt. Virgil G. Heminger, left, and Capt. Charles E. Burger, both of the 84th Fighter Inter-ceptor Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base. Burger, the pilot, and Heminger, the radar operator, both say without hesitation that they would ram an enemy plane loaded with H bombs if that were the only way the foe could be stopped.

he shares with Captain Burger, his senior officer and chauffeur.

The birth of the A-bomb, not to mention the more recent and more powerful H-bomb capable of wiping out an entire city and its surrounding population on one drop—was responsible for the original question being raised in the minds of defense brass.

NO LONGER, as in the dear, dead days of 1918, does one ace, seeing his erstwhile enemy out of ammunition, give the gallant highsign signifying: "We will meet again, my friend, when you are my equal."

All the lawn tennis rules applying to warfare have gone by the board, and today it is "for keeps" with all the players on each team.

The Air Force is aware of this and its pilots and radar operators, those who man the interceptors which guard our shores, are not in the dark.

"We are not under orders to resort to ramming an enemy," Burger said. "The decision is left to us. It will be strictly up to me, and my radar-operator, to decide.

"I, for one, would have no hesitation."

The youthful pilot wants it made clear, that neither he nor his buddy are suicide-bent. "This is no Kamakazi operation where we definitely start out with the idea of ramming the dude.

"We have studied ramming tactics and would try our damndest to come out of any collision alive and with our plane intact."

ALTHOUGH IT is the sort of maneuver which cannot be rehearsed, there are ways and means of doping out the simplest and safest way of pulling off the stunt with a 50-50 chance of survival.

According to Burger and Heminger, there are two basic tactics which might bring their Voodoo out of the skirmish in one piece while sending the enemy where all bad guys deserve to go.

In technical terms, these are the "elevator pass" and the "slide-by." Either would accomplish the desired end of ruining as much of the enemy's control surface as possible while leaving their own jet in flying condition.

"The elevator pass," Burger explains, "requires an approach from underneath to knock off his tail surface. The slide-by is a sidewise pass into him, hitting him a glancing blow and accomplishing the same thing.

Both men realize that the slightest error in judgment would mean immediate notification of their nearest of kin.

Who would make the ultimate and final decision?

As commander of the craft, it would be up to Burger, the pilot. Heminger, in the rear cockpit, could bail out via the ejector seat if he didn't agree with the plan of operation.

PILOT AND radar operator alike, however, were quick to point out that for one man to bail out requires giving the deep-six to the canopy which covers both cockpits, making the one-man operation extremely difficult, if not downright impossible.

If the Voodoo suffered too much damage as a result of the ram, there is still the chance of both men making a parachute drop. But this way out is definitely looked on as only a last resort.

Is the Air Force unanimous to a man in volunteering a do-or-die ramming tactic?

"I have heard fliers say they wouldn't do it," Heminger admits. "And it wasn't an automatic decision for me to make in the beginning," he adds.

But both Heminger and Burger are convinced that any pilot they have ever known would come through if the chips were down.

IN THEIR off hand discussion of the deadly tactic there is a noticeable absence of hurrah-type heroics. These are not the heroes of the flickering silver screen who, with a nostalgic smile for the girl they left behind, go down in flames willingly and gladly for the Great Cause.

Burger summed it up quite simply:

"We are professionals on a professional mission. Like any professionals on any job, we hate to see the job half-done.

Firemen—They're Always On Call

They Climb From Bed In A Hurry
When The Alarm Bell Rings Out

By DOROTHY SLATTERY

Let's say it is 2 o'clock in the morning. The day could be any day in San Rafael. The streets are quiet, houselights are darkened and most of the city sleeps.

The silence of the pre-dawn hours is shattered by the tinkling of glass as someone smashes a small red alarm box and yanks the switch announcing — FIRE!

The four-circuit alarm board at the firehouse at Fifth and C streets jumps into life: All lights in the building automatically switch on, the fire-bell clangs the number of the box as the alarm tape punches out the number in the same way an IBM slices a modern payroll slip. But this alarm board is not a modern machine; it is a 19th century product.

Thirty-one seconds after the initial gong of the fire alarm, the 10 men who were sleeping in the dormitories upstairs less than a minute before are aboard their engines and rolling into the night prepared to fight fire. The traditional firehouse pole has helped speed them to their stations on the truck.

The captain, sitting next to the driver aboard an engine, plans the route taken and speeds driven. Many times "fire happy" motorists endanger themselves and the fire-fighting vehicles trying to stage a race to the blaze. Others refuse to pay heed to the flashing red lights and wailing sirens bearing down on them.

WHEN THE engine company reaches the fire area, a man immediately jumps off from the rear, and connects the hose line to the nearest hydrant. The hose automatically unwinds as the driver pulls it five miles per hour to the fire. This entire operation takes approximately a minute and a half. Within 100 seconds it is possible that over a ton of water per minute will be streaming into the burning building.

It is the perpetual training of a fireman that makes speed records such as this possible. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning from 9 to noon the men are put through a rugged training program. They practice the laying of hose, the raising of ladders and the skills of salvaging or protecting merchandise from water and smoke damage. Seventy-five per cent of fire damage is caused by these two by-products.

When a fire alarm comes in across the board, the department must estimate the equipment needed from the location of the box. This information many times is too general and a hook-and-ladder occasionally has ended up being dispatched to fight a grass fire. For this reason the department prefers to receive alarms over the telephone. Valuable information may be gleaned from a witness that can speed up the fire fighting process.

But there have been times when frantic people have shouted into the receiver, "My house is on fire!" Then they hang up without giving a

IT'S NEARLY 2 o'clock in the morning, and George Schaefer, an engineer with the San Rafael Fire Department, is enjoying some reading in bed in the fire-fighters' sleeping quarters before dozing off. But there'll be no sleep for him this night. A fire alarm is about to come in. And for what happens then, see the next two pages of this issue of your Marin Magazine.

name or address. The firemen must wait for the victims to call again complaining, "What's keeping you?"

Deputy Chief Vance Trivett recalled a man phoning in to report his car on fire. The normal procedure is to send one engine company to handle a fire of this nature. As soon as the company reached its destination, a harried officer quickly called the firehouse and summoned help. The man had neglected to mention that his car was parked in the garage and the garage was attached to the house.

AS SOON AS the fire equipment screeches to a stop at the fire area, the officer in charge begins his "size-up." He decides if the blaze is a one, two or three alarmer.

A one alarm fire in a high value location such as the business area requires two engines (pumping companies) and one truck (hook and ladder). Off duty manpower as well as volunteers and additional equipment are summoned if the blaze should be diagnosed two alarms, and for three alarms the county fire department is called in to assist.

The first consideration during the "size-up" is the question of the life hazard. Trapped persons must be saved at all costs. The confinement of the flames and the actual fire combat are then taken care of in this order.

Fire-fighting is a hazardous occupation and men who choose it for a job must possess courage.

A San Rafael fireman, in the finest tradition of the profession, has never refused an order to enter a burning building.

Firemen must be careful and patient—endlessly checking and rechecking equipment and endlessly training and practicing rudiments of fire-fighting.

Deputy Chief Trivett places good horse sense and a knowledge of many trades as other essential qualities of a good professional fire-fighter. When a helmeted fireman breaks into a building, it is absolutely necessary he understand the plumbing, wiring and construction of the structure to protect his own life and do his job properly.

A comparatively new hazard to be added to the dangers of cave-ins, smoke and heat, is found in the wide use of synthetics. Many of these new substances, when ignited, give off poisonous gases. For this reason gas masks are mandatory equipment.

THE RIGID work schedule of the professional fireman prevents him from enjoying all his evenings at home with his family. Firemen work a 24-hour shift followed by 24 hours off. Every two weeks he is entitled to a double shift off. But at any time he is subject to recall in cases of a two alarm blaze or some other emergency. Many firemen have fire bells wired into their own homes.

The San Rafael Firehouse is equipped with a pool table, television and handball court for the men's leisure hours. The men buy their own food, cook it, and are responsible for their laundry, the making of beds and maintenance of quarters.

The lives of these men standing on call to protect the safety and property of San Rafael residents are crammed with activity and excitement. It's no wonder that so many little boys dream of growing up to become a fireman.

Tips on CARE OF A TAPE RECORDER. A tape recorder is an instrument that can give you years of musical enjoyment. However, like all other mechanical units, it requires a regular maintenance routine. If you neglect this periodic care, your recorder will give you poor tone and volume in a matter of a few weeks.

Approximately every ten hours of use, the erase and record play heads should be carefully cleaned with a head cleaner solution. This can be easily done by dipping one end of a cotton Q-stick (can be purchased at drug stores) and carefully wiping the faces of the heads. Don't scratch the heads, and don't get the swab so wet that it will drip. Use the opposite dry end of the Q-stick to wipe off the heads. At the same time clean off the rubber roller and capstan drive that pulls the tape through the heads with the same solution. During this cleaning process, do not let the cleaning solution come in contact with recording tape.

Don't use solutions that are not made for tape recorders. Carbon-Tet, although sometimes recommended, is a highly dangerous fluid as it causes permanent damage to your kidneys when you breathe the fumes.

If you have any questions about the cleaning of your tape recorder, visit our Stereo Hi-Fi store and we will be happy to show you how. You will find a complete supply of head cleaners, tape, and accessories.

IN COMES A FIRE ALARM over the board at the San Rafael Firehouse, being watched over here by Deputy Chief Vance Trivett and George Canessa. Note how the tape is being punched out. It will be their duty now to sound the fire bells that will rouse Engineer Schaefer from his bed upstairs, and send him and his fellow-fighters hustling into action against the flames which already are menacing the property—and possibly the lives—of some San Rafael citizens.

Fire-Fighters Go Into Action

There's No Time Lost When Flames Endanger Lives And Property On San Rafael Residents

THE ENGINE pulls out of the San Rafael Firehouse, bound for the fire scene. And the fire-fighters leaving their home base thoroughly briefed on their destination so that no time is lost in their trip. The fire truck departing for the fire scene with sirens wailing is a sight that makes the blood tingle in any small boy—and in a lot of other older citizens. But for the firemen aboard the truck, it's a grim and serious mission—one on which they may very well be called upon to risk their own safety for the lives of others.

BEFORE THE ENGINE pulled from the firehouse, Fireman Dennis Tuohy had climbed into position aboard the tailboard. From there he will ride to the fire scene. The engine carries DOWN THE TRADITIONAL fireman's pole goes Schaefer. The pole is an old device, but it's still the fastest means for firemen to get from upstairs quarters to their trucks downstairs when the alarm sounds. And you can find the poles in firehouses throughout the country. Drills in sliding down the pole are an important part of the training of all new firemen. This cover photo and the other pictures appearing on these two pages and on Page M9 were taken by Dick Steinhilber, Independent-Journal staff photographer.

THE FIRE IS OUT, the firemen have returned to the station, and here they enjoy a well-earned cup of hot coffee. And it tastes mighty good in the cold early morning

THE JOB of keeping these fire runs to a minimum is the aim of the Fire Prevention Bureau, under the supervision of Fire Marshal Virgilio Cheda, left. The division inspects buildings and conducts fire drills daily to eliminate the cause of fires and tighten the means of saving lives and property. Two men are assigned every morning to work with Cheda in this vital phase of anti-fire work. Above Deputy Chief Trivett goes over some plans with the marshal.

Books Make Fine Gifts For The Kids

Here Are Some New Ones Youngsters Will Enjoy

(Editor's Note: These reviews of juvenile books by Mrs. Richard M. Adams of Tiburon will be of special interest to Marin Magazine readers, what with juvenile book week currently being observed and Christmas shopping just around the corner. Such books make an ideal gift for youngsters. And Marin bookstores are currently well stocked with such works. Then, too, there is the Reed School District Book Fair where parents can order these and other books today and tomorrow at the Reed School.)

WHICH WITCH? by Robert Basson. Pictures by John Tepich. David McKay Company, Inc. Ages 4-8. $2.75.

Here is a good book for reading aloud in a group, for slow readers who don't care much for reading but don't mind laughing, and for fast readers who don't mind being thrown off their timing by a chortle or so.

Even the message seekers will not be disappointed. They will undoubtedly applaud the final judgment pronounced upon the rich witch (not the one with an inch) when her evil scheme to turn ice-cream to pitch goes awry.

"Which Witch?" contains fun, full-page pictures, and the wisdom of brevity.

THE HAPPY BIRTHDAY UMBRELLA by David De Jong. Illustrated by Harvey Weiss. Little, Brown. Ages 6 to 9. $2.75.

On the morning of his birthday young David looked out of his window and saw a large, yellow umbrella lying on the grass.

Though dilapidated and without distinction to begin with, by the time young David met Grandmother at the train, his umbrella was a collector's item.

Compared to the unbelievable umbrella, the people in the story, with the exception of twittering Miss Twill, seem a rather colorless lot. But the idea of a "Happy Birthday" umbrella is so appealing and the pictures are so successful in whimsical characterization that youngsters will undoubtedly find a satisfying identification with David and feel, as undoubtedly David did, that anyone who didn't own such an unusual bumbershoot was somewhat wanting in distinction anyhow.

POQUITO The Little Mexican Duck by Nora S. Unwin. David McKay. Ages 4 to 8. $2.75.

Poquito is a little Mexican misfit who was hatched and raised in a family of turkeys.

Wistfully Poquito wanders about in the world lamenting, "I wish I were someone or could do something."

There is more to distinguish Poquito from the Ugly Duckling than a colorful, Mexican setting. While this variation upon the theme of self-discovery is less fairy-landish, it is more reassuring. Not every ugly duckling turns into a swan, but everyone can, like Poquito, discover the thing he can do best.

HOLD BACK THE HUNTER by Dale White. A novel set in Yellowstone National Park. The John Day Company. Ages 10-14. $3.50.

Most people dismissed as tall tales old Jim Bridger's accounts of the fantastic sights he had seen at the headwaters of the Yellowstone River. A few like Young Gabe, a Shoshone half-breed and Old Jim's foster son, believed the stories were true and set out on an expedition through Crow country to see for themselves.

Young Gabe's discovery of the "eyepoppers" old Jim had described as well as the young adventurer's self-discovery make for a tale so absorbing in itself that the author did not need to resort to a single ambush from the Crows.

In "Hold Back the Hunter," Mr. White has perceptively portrayed the mixed feelings of a boy who belonged neither to the white man nor the Indians and describes, almost poetically at times, the beauty and magic of Yellowstone — "... the falls drummed through their ancient rhythm, low-keyed, ageless, like the Shoshone drums communing with the Great Spirit."

While the story is fictional, the events around which it is constructed are historical fact.

SEVEN TALES by H. C. Andersen. Translated from the Danish by Eva Le Gallienne. Pictures by Maurice Sendak. Harper and Bros. Ages 7 up. $3.95.

After reading Miss Le Gallienne's clear, sparkling, free-moving translation, the reviewer was surprised to find it differed from two other noted translations, not in interpretation, but rather in a word here and a shading there which make the stories seem just the way Andersen himself would tell them today.

Children who have not taken to Andersen before, will be irresistibly drawn to this collection at first sight. It is not the usual large compendium in small print with pictures at a premium. In this small collection for beginning readers, the print is large and, best of all, Maurice Sendak's charming, medieval pictures on practically every page strike just the right balance between the literal and the symbolic.

Together Miss Le Gallienne and Mr. Sendak have created a delightfully refreshing rendering of "The Ugly Duckling," "The Fir Tree," "Happy Family," "The Darning Needle," "The Steadfast Tin Soldier," "The Princess and the Pea," and "It's Absolutely True."

PUPPETS AND PEBBLES by William Jay Smith. Illustrated by Juliet Kepes. Atlantic-Little, Brown. Ages 4 up. $2.75.

"D is for Dog/ Says the prancing French poodle / As he trots with the band / When it plays 'Yankee Doodle': / 'Bow-wow! I hate CATS— / The whole kit-and-caboodle! / D is for Dog."

In this nonsense ABC book, the author's clever use of rhyme and repetition and the artist's imaginatively definitive pictures in bright, primary colors combine to make learning the alphabet a humorous event for the entire family.

FOR OLDER READERS

History Made Interesting Again By Writer Holbrook

THE GOLDEN AGE OF QUACKERY, by Stewart H. Holbrook. Macmillan, 287 pp., $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce Anderson.

He who has never purchased a potion, tinkered with a tonic or cautiously considered a cure-all may read this book and chortle at his fellow mortals; the rest of us may read it with a smile for ourselves and all mankind.

Here in "The Golden Age of Quackery" is a riotous rogues' gallery of those who have fattened on the sick of the land — from the med show man with a valise full of bottles and one eye on the sheriff to such imposing figures as Lydia Pinkham of the Vegetable Compound and Dr. S. B. Hartman of Peruna.

Stewart H. Holbrook, whose excursions into the bypaths of America's past have produced a whole series of the most readable (and nonetheless accurate) historical books ever written, has applied his astringently humorous pen to a subject worthy of his talents; the panaceas that grandpa swallowed. "The Golden Age of Quackery," deals primarily with that period of untrammelled pharmaceutical laissez faire that preceded the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906. But there is mention, too, of electronic "cures" and vitamin tablets to remind us that grandpa's grandson is just as much a sucker for the artful pitch of the medicine man.

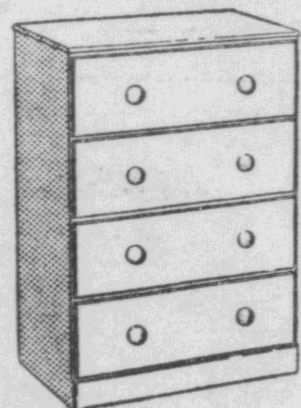

Printer's Ink, contends Holbrook (with a fine array of evidence), built the patent medicine racket in America. Now television has taken over. In a day when "reputable" medical men knew little beyond emetics and blood letting, the self-styled doctor with his bottles of "Indian herb remedy" quite naturally found a ready market. By the time medicine was coming of age, his simple cure-all had grown into such monumental money-makers as Swamp Root, Ka-Ton-Ka and Kickapoo Sagwa — all crediting their miraculous formulas to the unhappy Indian. And a new generation of suckers was buying them by the millions, making their proprietors rich beyond dreams.

Enough of the pharmacopeia of fraud to stock well a corner drug store's shelves is here, along with such notable practitioners of "therapy of pipe and wire" as Gaylord Wilshire, who promoted a stretch of Los Angeles sand-flat into the first "Miracle Mile" but would up marketing a thing called I-ON-A-CO which was purported to cure all human ills by magnetism.

They are a fascinating lot, these consummate quacks — even if in some cases the road to their success was paved with grave stones. And Holbrook, a native Vermonter transplanted to Oregon who is blurred by his publisher as "the only ex-lumberjack who ever lectured at Harvard," has made a fascinating book of them.

If our high school history (pardon — "social studies"!) teachers would require their students to read just one of Holbrook's volumes, there is a good chance the kids would become so fascinated they'd actually study American history. But of course, they'd not find much of it written as Stewart Holbrook writes it (more's the pity!).

Studio Distracting, But Inspiring

Tiburon Photographer Works With Sea Outside Her Window, S.F. In Distance

By NANCY WISE

Rita Graves, Tiburon photographer now exhibiting in Belvedere's First National Bank, has perfected a style of portraiture that resembles etching — or line-drawing — and this, with her ability to catch the spirit of the subject, gives her pictures real distinction.

Distinctive, too, is the word for Miss Graves' studio. With a second-story exposure, her picture windows frame the exciting view that is sought by hundreds of Belvedere-Tiburon weekend tourists.

ACROSS THE Bay's shimmering surface she sees San Francisco against an ever-changing sky. And directly below her is the dock and small boating activity of Corinthian Cove. She confesses that it makes working difficult. But it's also inspiring. And for variety, winter tide and winds create a slapping and a splashing that give another kind of excitement to her studio-living area.

Uniqueness exists in her life, too. Unwilling to allow existence to become mundane, she interrupted her routine a few years ago to take a four-month European trip. Mementoes include a sequence of color shots of the sun rising on the Matterhorn — these made at 4 a.m., from the eider down comfort of her chalet bedroom.

But the incident that still amazed her is the experience of photographing the Pope, then Pius XII.

Making no attempt to smuggle in a camera, she walked past uniformed guards — and their swords — holding her camera openly in her hand. When she discovered it was not going to be "checked," she made quick plans for taking a memorable photograph. Following the Pope's audience, and when it was her turn to be greeted by him, she asked if she could take his picture. Her guest at the audience was an Italian grandmother whose family she had met on the 12-hour train ride from Monte Carlo to Rome, and with whom she'd been staying as a result of this train acquaintance. The Pope's surprise at Rita's request was obvious, but he merely turned to the grandmother, spoke to her in Italian for a few moments, and when Rita asked again, this time in her limited Italian, he laughed in amusement at her pronunciation. But granted her request!

The resulting picture has become a favorite in her collection.

WHILE IN Luxembourg, Miss Graves found the then U.S. Minister Perle Mesta a gracious hostess, and photographed her in color and in black and white. Among others she "snapped" on this occasion was Paul Henri-Spaak, then United Nations president.

Upon her return to California she lived in Pasadena, and while there photographed the ex-chancellor of the University of Chicago, Robert M. Hutchins.

Marking her first year in Tiburon with her Boardwalk exhibit, Miss Graves invited her Bay Area friends to visit the current display. She has exhibited before in the Pasadena Art Museum (the first woman photographer to do so), at the Ebell Club of Los Angeles, and at the Sausalito Art Fair.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

By BERT BROWN, Marin Cleaners, GL 4-4792

"Why Is My Dress Stiff After Dry Cleaning?"

I don't wonder that you ask that question. There is a perfectly good answer for it, too. It isn't the fault of the drycleaning, but it is caused by dry-cleaning. If this seems to be a paradox, here is the explanation.

Some fabrics are naturally stiff because of their weave, the type of fiber used or the fabric construction. Other fabrics are limp or soft and require treating with a special sizing, often resins, to stiffen them.

However, we are not concerned with soft fabrics, but stiff ones. The fabrics which are too stiff have softening agents applied to them. It makes them drape better and feel better. The trouble with these softening agents is that they are not too durable. Even silicone finished, though more durable than the older sulfated tallows and oils, eventually break down in cleaning.

The stiffness may not be noted for a number of dry-cleanings, then you become aware that the garment is stiffer and doesn't drape as well. That means the softening agent has broken down gradually and left the garment. The same is true of stiffening agents. Eventually a fabric may become limp and soft where it once stood up firmly. The finish has broken down.

The fault lies in the finish applied to the original fabric. The cause is the necessary cleansing of the garment. Your cleaner may not be aware that the feel of the garment has been altered. You are. Tell your cleaner about it. Usually he can do something to restore much of the original feel.

pered the field and the hanger. When we opened the hanger door and found two LB30s sitting there we were heartsick. The Zero's bullet punctured the plane and oil was dripping from the tanks.

"WE KNEW there were some Flying Fortresses on the island and thought they might come by and pick us up. We also knew the Japs had landed, so we prepared the guns with ammo and made plans to take over some high ground in the area.

"About dusk we heard the Forts coming, so we grabbed up a bunch of parachutes and spread them out on the field so they would know it was all right to land. They went right on by, and then the lead plane made a slow turn and came back and landed.

"The captain asked us what we wanted and I told him, 'We want to get the hell out.' He could see that, and so he asked us for gas. Well the Zero had punctured all the gas drums around. But we went around and shook and tapped every one and finally found enough to refuel. We took them right up to the wings and poured from the bungs."

There were 27 on the plane that Varner flew out of Java. (A normal crew contained only a handful of persons). As many as possible were crammed into the front of the plane during take-off, and then gradually as the plane gained altitude some of them tip-toed back to and crouched in the tail, careful not to upset the balance.

It was a rough trip. The plane hit a thunderhead and dropped 1,500 feet suddenly, causing the pilot to crack his head against radio gear. The planes had left Java in the middle of the night and reached Broom, in western Australia, the next morning. They left shortly afterwards for Meibourne, hot baths and pots of hot tea, just missing a devastating Japanese air raid at Broom.

Red carried his own service record and with it escaped the dreary confines of a temporary service camp. He worked his way to Laverton Air Base where he found Alexander the Swoose.

"IT WAS no damned good," Varner said. "It was one of the types of Forts without tail guns. But I checked it out and the old thing could fly with fixing up."

It was suggested that the plane could be used by Royce and Britt in combat command flights since it was a usable aircraft that would not take away fire power from regular bombing missions.

For Red and his crew there followed numberless flights, many of them into the hot and heavy fighting. There were long grueling hours of duty—days of it. But, too, there was the lighter side.

Here are some examples: Varner ferried Scotch whisky from the Australian base to the advance base of Port Moresby in New Guinea.

"My buddies would open the inspection plates, find the bottles, and when we returned to Australia we would find pound notes in their places," Red said.

"Once one of Brett's aides objected. He wanted to know why, when he found a case of Scotch in the plane. I said it was for Brig. Gen. Mike Scanlon at Port Moresby. And so I told this young bird that he was just a passenger. And he wanted to know how I knew we were going to Port Moresby. That was supposed to be a secret. But I always found out these things because I wouldn't take off unless I knew we could put on enough gas to get home. That way we didn't have to take any gas away from the front.

"ANYWAYS, when we landed the old general came up and asked me if I had anything for him. I said I did and I pulled a case of Coke off the plane, and boy, did his face fall. Then I brought out the Scotch. And he took some for himself and then passed some around to the ground crew. And that shut up that young aide."

Red, by his very nature, didn't always see eye to eye with command. One day Captain Kurtz and Red got into an argument, and, to calm down Kurtz, Red told him maybe some day he would get a nice promotion to major. Kurtz wanted to know how Red was going to do that, but Red just said, "Let's wait and see."

Red always posted the names of the flight members, including bigwigs, members of the crew, et al, inside the door of the plane. One day he posted Kurtz as a major.

As Gen. Brett boarded the plane he saw the notice and allowed there must be some mistake. "No, general," Red said, "he's not a major but we all think he should be." Two weeks later Kurtz was a major.

One day the crew was notified to get ready for a top-secret flight for a VIP. "We waxed the plane and took off the guns," Red said.

The VIP was Sir Charles Burnett, air vice marshal of the United Kingdom's Royal

RED VARNER dons again the old flight jacket which served him so faithfully during his service aboard the Swoose. The photo was taken by Independent-Journal staff photographer Dick Steinheimer in Varner's Marin home while the colorful Air Force old-timer reminisced for I-J reporter Donald G. Davis about his military career.

Air Force. "They told us to handle him with kid gloves, that he was very touchy."

That trip was to Honolulu and long before the plane reached its destination they were calling each other Red and Sir Charles. At one stop in the island-hopping flight, the crew had to stand by the plane. Sir Charles brought Red and the rest of the crew their breakfast.

From W. L. White's "Queens Die Proudly," comes this account by Red of his encounter with Lyndon Johnson—"a big lanky guy from Texas, a real congressman, only now he was out inspecting this area as a Navy lieutenant commander."

THE FLIGHT was over Australia and because of a navigational error the plane was lost over a "wilderness which looked like the rumpled parts of New Mexico and Arizona."

Everyone looked pretty worked up "except the Swoose crew," and Johnson paced up and down the better to do some of his own thinking.

"With all of those guys yammering at you, telling you what to do . . . and this guy pacing . . . so I grabs this pacing guy and 'Now look,' I says to him. 'You may carry plenty of rank on your shoulders, but to this pilot you're just 200 pounds of ballast."

"And I herded him back to the very tip of the plane and pushed him down, parachute and all, on that little seat."

Gen. Brett, in 1943, was called back to the States, and he took his crew with him.

"The old Swoose," the Queens story says, "with her war-worn motors, made it from Brisbane to San Francisco in 36 hours 10 minutes flying time, the only one of the original 35 on Clark Field to see home again."

The Swoose was ordered on a bond tour, during which Red refused, during a visit to a B17 factory, to have the tobacco tin patches replaced, and sold $60,000 in bonds in a department store window.

Brett was assigned to the Caribbean and took the MEMORIES CAME FLOODING BACK to Red Varner when he seated himself at the controls of his favorite aircraft, the Swoose. This picture was taken in 1955 when Varner, on a vacation trip, visited Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland where the old Swoose now rests along with some other celebrated aircraft.

Air Force's Red Varner Had Lively Service Career

Swoose with him. Red and his crew helped break in a new one and then went to new assignments. The Swoose shortly thereafter was deemed unfit for further service and was relegated to the bone pile at a base in Arizona.

That, however, was not the end of Red's association with the Swoose.

LOS ANGELES wanted the old plane as a war memento. Through a friend of Kurtz, money was advanced to recondition the plane for a flight to Los Angeles. Red helped get the old machine in flying order again.

Los Angeles kept the plane about three years and then it was ordered to Chicago to an air museum, the idea of Gen. Arnold, then retired. The old crew was gathered together once again and the plane was flown to Chicago. But the museum was never built, and eventually the Swoose was taken to Andrews Air Force Base, Md. "And there it sits," Red said. Two other celebrated planes also were sent there:

The Enola Gay, the B17 that dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima in 1945, and the Mixmaster, an experimental aircraft with counter-rotating props.

Red last saw the Swoose in 1955 when he and his wife were on a vacation.

After the war bond drive Red was stationed at Hamilton again. After they left Australia each of the enlisted members of the crew had been commissioned. Red, a captain when he returned to Hamilton, was assigned as advance training maintenance officer. He served briefly also on a reclamation crew when air bases were being closed throughout the West.

"But then they decided to purge the officer ranks," Red said, "and I found out I was on the list."

General Arnold pushed some buttons and Red was soon off on a 45-day leave to the Orient. In Japan, he contacted generals he had known when they were little more than shavetail lieutenants, and soon he had an assignment in Korea.

He was assigned to Col. Dean H. Hess, who was commanded to help form a Korean air force. This was prior to the outbreak of Korean hostilities.

Hess, in his book "Battle Hymn," has this to say of Red:

"Though we thought him a bit old — he was around 50 — for an operation like ours, we soon found that he could pay his way. Like all experienced service operators, he knew every rope and how to pull it. He thought straight as a ruler. But best, his unmilitary antics kept up the morale of the whole organization.

"WE HAD side holsters for our pistols, quite inconvenient in an aircraft, and we had been wishing for shoulder holsters. Speaking lightly, Red volunteered one night to get us some. He disappeared and two hours later returned with shoulder holsters for all of us.

of war bond sales. At one point Varner was credited with selling $60,000 worth of bonds in a department store window.

I never asked where he had got them.

"One night he invited me to the operations shack for some Korean beer. Wondering where he had got it, I followed him. Out on the porch of our dilapidated operations shack . . . the pilots sat around . . . downing a few bottles . . . A Korean pilot, always polite and respectful toward General Kim (Kim Chung Yul, chief of staff of the Korean air force) . . . was formally pouring the the general a beer.

"Red grabbed it out of his hand, grinned down at the general, and poured it himself. 'I'll take care of the Old Man, Johnny,' he roared — and if I ever worried much about the ice not breaking between Korean and American flyers, I stopped right then . . ."

When generals visited every one "climbed into his best togs, but we still were a sorry looking lot . . . bleary-eyed from lack of sleep, and needing shaves . . . Red, on one occasion was wearing a pair of rubber Korean boots . . . a black Korean stovepipe hat with his captain's bars pinned to it. General (Hoyt) Vandenberg (chief of staff of the Air Force) saw him and looked startled. Then he recognized the old-timer and began to grin, finally laughing as he greeted Red warmly."

Colonel Hess could never "steel" himself for Red's "harmless and cockeyed flaunting of military manners."

GEN. (GEORGE E.) Stratemeyer (commander of the Eastern Air Force) dropped in one day, and Red "this time more or less in uniform, met him on the field and slapped him hard on the back. I saw the poor general wince. Then Red shouted, so loud everyone on the field could hear, as well as probably a few Communist guerrillas in the hills, 'When are you going to promote me you old s.o.b.?' I gritted my teeth and waited for the explosion . . . There was laughter instead. Red had been a good friend of the general's when I was in high school . . ."

Red's old crew mate Boone said recently he has never known "anyone with such drive and compulsion. He has a respect for rank, but it goes only so far. Red will sound off, but it's done in a respectful manner. He would let a general know what should be done from an enlisted man's viewpoint. I've known times when he would sit on the corner of General Arnold's desk and say, 'well, Hap, how's it going?'"

After service in Korea Varner returned to duty in Japan.

"At 5 in the morning," he said as though it happened yesterday, "on Aug. 8, 1951, I had my heart attack. I was in bed and had a terrible pain in my left arm, like it was full of needles. They put me in the hospital and I was in bed three months. Staying in bed was the hardest job in my life."

Red was in the hospital two more months. He retired as a major Feb. 8, 1952.

"I just fished for eight months," he said.

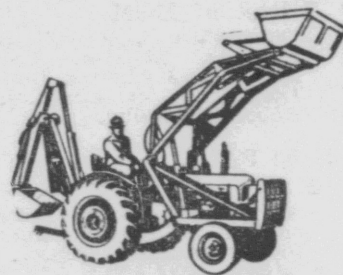

Today, Red takes it easy. He works for the Brown-Ely Construction Co., but he plays too. He is a member of the Elks Club in San Rafael, and cronies and friends find him there Saturdays playing cards. Red also belongs to the Marin Rod and Gun Club.

AND OCCASIONALLY he gets out to Hamilton Air Force Base when one of his old friends lands there for an official visit.

Like many a war veteran at his Bayside Acres, he has a trunkful of souvenirs. But mostly, he likes to tell about the times he had.

He tells his stories well, and when he does a dying era of America comes alive again.

Weekly TV Log

She's All Over TV —Simultaneously

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A pert blonde actress, starring in her first movie, has the unique distinction of co-starring in scores of TV series simultaneously.

She's Whitney Blake, who makes her living playing feminine leads opposite all the video cowboys and detectives.

Most cuties complain they can't find a TV program of their own. Whitney accepts the fact and makes a handsome living appearing in a different series each week—repeating a few along the way.

Her credits include "77 Sunset Strip," "Ellery Queen," "Gunsmoke," "Zane Grey Theater" and "Cheyenne," among others.

"The average series films 39 episodes a season," Whitney said from a makeup chair at Warner Brothers Studio. "I work almost 52 weeks a year, so I'm better off than if I had my own show."

"HOW? First of all I don't have to play the same character every week. Secondly, I'm not tied down to a regular schedule. And thirdly, it leaves me free for motion picture jobs."

Whitney just completed her first film, "—30—," opposite Jack Webb, playing the first screen wife Jack has ever had.

"It was television that landed me the role," the dimpled newcomer said. "I'd appeared in one of Jack's 'The D.A.'s Man' segments. Because I had not been typed by playing in one series, he thought I would be just right for the movie."

"With few exceptions, females on detective and western series have subordinate roles to the heroes."
